Subsection 95(3.3) applies after December 20, 2002.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 11, 2005:

Mr. Angelo Nikolakakis, Ernst & Young LLP, Montreal QC

Dear Mr. Nikolakakis:

I am writing in response to your correspondence dated April 4, 2005 to Mr. Wallace Conway in which you express your concern with respect to the wording of the definition "triggering disposition" in proposed subsection 95(3.3) of the Income Tax Act. That proposed subsection is contained in the proposals announced by the Minister of Finance on February 27, 2004 in connection with foreign affiliates.

In the example provided in your correspondence, a foreign affiliate (FA1) of a corporation resident in Canada holds shares ("specified shares" within the meaning of proposed paragraph 95(2)(c.1) of the Act) of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate (FA2) of the corporation resident in Canada that are excluded property. FA1 disposes of those specified shares of FA2 to another foreign affiliate (FA3) of the corporation resident in Canada. As part of the same series of transactions that includes that first disposition (the internal disposition), those specified shares of FA2 are disposed of by FA3 to an arm's length party (the external disposition) that is not a "specified purchaser" in respect of the corporation resident in Canada.

As you note in your correspondence, the internal disposition of the specified shares (i.e., the disposition by FA1 to FA3) would be subject to the rules in proposed paragraphs 95(2)(c.2) and (c.3) which suspend, in certain circumstances, gains that, but for those paragraphs, would have otherwise been derived from the internal disposition of the specified shares. You indicate that the external disposition of the specified shares (i.e., the disposition by FA3 to the arm's length party) should be a "triggering disposition" in respect of the internal disposition. However, you are concerned that the current wording of paragraph (b) of the definition "triggering disposition" in proposed subsection 95(3.3) would not produce that result. That paragraph results in a particular disposition of a specified share not being a triggering disposition of the specified share if that particular disposition of the specified share is part of a series of transactions or events that includes the acquisition, by a specified purchaser in respect of the particular corporation resident in Canada, of the specified share. Since, in your example, the internal disposition by FA1 to FA3 of the specified shares and the external disposition by FA3 to the arm's length party of the specified shares are part of the same series of transactions or events, the external disposition would be disqualified from being a triggering disposition in respect of the internal disposition that would permit the release of the suspended gains. You submit that such a result would not be appropriate if, as in your example, at the end of that series of transactions or events, the arm's length party is the holder of the specified shares and is not a specified purchaser in respect of the corporation resident in Canada and, at that time, no entity that is a specified purchaser in respect of the corporation resident in Canada holds any right or interest in respect of the specified shares or any property the value of which tracks the value of the specified shares.

From a tax policy perspective, we agree that, in the circumstances described in your example, the external disposition of the specified shares by FA3 to the arm's length party should qualify as a triggering disposition and result in a release of the suspended gains in respect of the internal disposition of the specified shares. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend that paragraph (b) of the definition "triggering disposition" contained in proposed subsection 95(3.3) of the Act be revised. Under our recommendation, the revised wording of that paragraph (which describes a non-triggering disposition) would include a requirement that, at the end of the series of transactions or events that includes the internal and external dispositions of the specified shares, a specified purchaser (in respect of the particular corporation resident in Canada referred to in that paragraph) holds the specified shares or, in general terms, some other right or interest in respect of the specified shares or any property the value of which tracks the value of the specified shares.

In your correspondence, you also note that similar concerns arise in connection with paragraph (b) of the definitions of "triggering disposition" in proposed subsections 95(3.4) and (3.5) of the Act in the February 2004 proposals. A recommendation will be made that those definitions be revised in the same fashion.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Subsection 95(3.5) applies after December 20, 2002.

Related Provisions: 95(2)(h.3) — Designated replacement property deemed to be specified property; 95(2)(h.4) — Where part of specified property disposed of; 95(2)(h.5) — Designated replacement property acquired by specified purchaser; 95(3.2) — Definitions; 95(3.3) “triggering disposition”; 95(3.4) “triggering disposition” — Definitions for other purposes; 95(3.6) — Partnerships and trusts; 248(10) — Series of transactions or events.

(3.6) Partnerships and trusts — For the purposes of paragraphs (2)(c.1) to (c.5), (e.3) to (e.5), (f.3) to (f.9) and (h) to (h.5) and subsections (3.2) to (3.5), in determining if a non-resident corporation is a foreign affiliate of a particular corporation resident in Canada or of a particular taxpayer resident in Canada, as the case may be, in circumstances where, at any time, a person or partnership (referred to in this subsection as the “holder”) is a member of a partnership, or has a beneficial interest in a trust (other than an exempt trust),

(a) the partnership or the trust, as the case may be, is deemed to be a non-resident corporation having capital stock of a single class divided into 100 issued shares;

(b) the holder is deemed to own at that time that proportion of the issued shares of that class that

(i) the fair market value, at that time, of the holder’s partnership interest in the partnership or of the holder’s beneficial interest in the trust, as the case may be,

(ii) the fair market value, at that time, of all partnership interests in the partnership or of all beneficial interests in the trust; and

(c) for the purpose of paragraph (b), the fair market value, at any time, of the holder’s beneficial interest in a trust (other than a non-discretionary trust within the meaning assigned by subsection 17(15)) is deemed to be the fair market value, at that time, of all beneficial interests in the trust.

Technical Notes: New subsection 95(3.6) provides rules to be used in determining if a non-resident corporation is a foreign affiliate of a particular corporation resident in Canada or of a particular taxpayer resident in Canada for the purposes of paragraphs 95(2)(c.1) to (c.5), (e.3) to (e.5), (f.3) to (f.9) and (h) to (h.5) and subsections 95(3.2) to (3.5) where a person or partnership is a member of a partnership or a beneficiary under a trust.

New subsection 95(3.6) provides that in determining if a non-resident corporation is a foreign affiliate of a particular corporation resident in Canada or of a particular taxpayer resident in Canada, as the case may be, in circumstances where, at any time, a person or partnership (which person or partnership is referred to here as the “holder”) is a member of a partnership, or has a beneficial interest in a trust (other than an exempt trust),

- the partnership or trust, as the case may be, is deemed to be a non-resident corporation having capital stock of a single class divided into 100 issued shares,
- the holder is deemed to own at that time that proportion of the issued shares of that class that the fair market value of the holder’s partnership interest in the partnership or of the holder’s beneficial interest in the trust, as the case may be,

is of the fair market value at that time of all partnership interests in the partnership or of all beneficial interests in the trust, as the case may be, and

- the fair market value, at any time, of the holder’s beneficial interest in a trust (other than a non-discretionary trust within the meaning assigned by subsection 17(15)) is deemed to be the fair market value, at that time, of all beneficial interests in the trust.

Subsection 95(3.6) applies after December 20, 2002.

Related Provisions: 95(3.2) — Definitions.

(3.7) Anti-avoidance — 150 beneficiaries — If it can be reasonably considered that one of the main reasons that an entity holds, at any time, a capital interest in a trust is to cause the trust to satisfy the condition in paragraph (b) of the definition “exempt trust” in subsection (3.2), the trust is deemed not to have satisfied at that time that condition.

Technical Notes: New subsection 95(3.7) provides that if it can be reasonably considered that one of the main reasons that an entity holds, at any time, a capital interest in a trust is to cause the trust to satisfy the condition in paragraph (b) of the definition “exempt trust” in subsection 95(3.2) [now in 95(1) — ed.], the trust is deemed not to have satisfied at that time that condition.

Subsection 95(3.7) applies after December 20, 2002.

(3.8) Computing exempt surplus — No amount is to be included in computing the exempt surplus of a foreign affiliate (other than a controlled foreign affiliate) of a particular corporation resident in Canada in respect of a gain of that foreign affiliate arising on a disposition, described in any of paragraphs (2)(d) and (e) and (e.3) to (e.5), of excluded property if it may reasonably be considered that one of the main reasons for the claiming of a relevant cost base, or for electing proceeds of disposition, in excess of the adjusted cost base of the excluded property disposed of was the creation of exempt surplus of that foreign affiliate in respect of the particular corporation resident in Canada (or in respect of a corporation resident in Canada with which the particular corporation resident in Canada does not deal at arm’s length), having regard to, amongst other things, the following:

(a) the amount of any foreign income tax paid by that foreign affiliate in respect of the gain arising on the disposition;

(b) the amount of any distribution made, or dividend paid, on or after the disposition, to the particular corporation resident in Canada or a corporation resident in Canada with which the particular corporation resident in Canada does not deal at arm’s length; and

(c) the amount of any election under section 93 made in respect of a disposition of a share of a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada or of a share of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada with which the particular corporation resident in Canada does not deal at arm’s length.

Technical Notes: New subsection 95(3.8) is an anti-avoidance rule to prevent the premature recognition of exempt surplus (the non-taxable portion of a capital gain) on an internal sale of excluded property to which any of proposed new paragraphs 95(2)(d) and (e) and (e.3) to (e.5) applies. Although capital gains on internal sales of excluded property, to which those paragraphs apply, create foreign accrual property income, where the foreign affiliate is not a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada the particular corporation resident in Canada is not subjected to Canadian tax on that foreign accrual property income. Therefore, the particular corporation resident in Canada can be advantaged on an internal disposition of excluded property by claiming a relevant cost base, or electing proceeds of disposition, greater than the adjusted cost base of the property disposed of, in particular where the foreign jurisdiction does not tax capital gains. Where the foreign jurisdiction does tax capital gains, the particular corporation resident in Canada may wish to recognize gains because of the foreign taxes paid and the desire to create taxable surplus to match the related taxes, which would be appropriate where the amount of tax reflects Canadian tax rates on capital gains.

New subsection 95(3.8) provides that no amount may be added to the exempt surplus of a foreign affiliate of a particular corporation resident in Canada in respect of the gain arising on the internal disposition of excluded property if it is reasonable to conclude that one of the main reasons for claiming a relevant cost base, or electing proceeds of disposition, greater than the adjusted cost base of the property disposed of on that internal disposition was the creation of exempt surplus in respect of the particular corporation resident in Canada or in respect of a corporation resident in Canada with which the particular corporation resident in Canada does not deal at arm’s length.

The factors to consider in making this determination include the following:

- the amount of foreign income tax paid,
- the amount of distribution made, or dividend paid, to the particular corporation resident in Canada or to a corporation resident in Canada with which the particular corporation resident in Canada does not deal at arm's length, and
- the amount of any election under section 93 made in respect of a disposition of a share of a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada or of a share of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada with which the particular corporation resident in Canada does not deal at arm's length.

Subsection 95(3.8) applies after December 20, 2002.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation (Part 2 — foreign affiliates), subsec. 133(29), will add subsecs. 95(3.1) to (3.8), applicable as follows:

- (i) subsec. (3.1), to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. However, if a taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which this Act is assented to, the subsec. applies to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994;
- (ii) subsecs. (3.2) to (3.7), after December 20, 2002; and
- (iii) subsec. (3.8), to dispositions that occur after February 27, 2004.

Note: the definitions "eligible trust", "exempt trust", "specified fixed interest" and "specified purchaser", formerly defined in subsec. 95(3.2) above (and also in subsec. 95(3.5) in the case of "specified purchaser"), are now defined in subsec. 95(1).

(4) Definitions — In this section,

"direct equity percentage" at any time of any person in a corporation is the percentage determined by the following rules:

(a) for each class of the issued shares of the capital stock of the corporation, determine the proportion of 100 that the number of shares of that class owned by that person at that time is of the total number of issued shares of that class at that time, and

(b) select the proportion determined under paragraph (a) for that person in respect of the corporation that is not less than any other proportion so determined for that person in respect of the corporation at that time, and the proportion selected under paragraph (b), when expressed as a percentage, is that person's direct equity percentage in the corporation at that time;

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-392: Meaning of term "share".

"equity percentage" at any time of a person, in any particular corporation, is the total of

(a) the person's direct equity percentage at that time in the particular corporation, and

(b) all percentages each of which is the product obtained when the person's equity percentage at that time in any corporation is multiplied by that corporation's direct equity percentage at that time in the particular corporation except that for the purposes of the definition "participating percentage" in subsection (1), paragraph (b) shall be read as if the reference to "any corporation" were a reference to "any corporation other than a corporation resident in Canada";

Related Provisions: 94(1)(d) — Deemed ownership in trust deemed to be corporation for FAPI purposes; 149.1(1)"equity percentage" — Meaning of term for private foundation corporate-holding rules.

"relevant cost base" to a foreign affiliate of property at any time means the adjusted cost base to the affiliate of the property at that time or such greater amount as the taxpayer claims not exceeding the fair market value of the property at that time.

Proposed Amendment — Earlier reading of 95(2)(g.03)

Application: The December 18, 2009 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 9(3), will amend the opening words of subsec. 26(37) of the Budget and Economic Statement Implementation Act, 2007 (Bill C-28, S.C. 2007, c. 35) to provide that for taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002 and before 2009, paragraph 95(2)(g.03) shall be read as if the references to "qualified foreign affiliate" were references to "qualified foreign corporation".

(g) income earned, a loss incurred or a capital gain or capital loss realized, as the case may be, in a taxation year by a particular foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout the taxation year or that is a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer throughout the taxation year, because of a fluctuation in the value of the currency of a country other than Canada relative to the value of Canadian currency, is deemed to be nil if it is earned, incurred or realized in reference to any of the following sources:

(i) a debt obligation that was owing to

(A) another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout the year or any other non-resident corporation to which the particular affiliate and the taxpayer are related throughout the year (which other foreign affiliate or other non-resident corporation is referred to in this paragraph as a "qualified foreign corporation"), or

Application: The December 18, 2009 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 9(5), will amend subsec. 26(40) of the Budget and Economic Statement Implementation Act, 2007 (Bill C-28, S.C. 2007, c. 35) to change the above election deadline to "the day that is 18 months after the taxpayer's filing due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes December 14, 2007".

Technical Notes: Second, the deadlines are being extended by 18 months in respect of the 7 different elections to effect further retroactive application of certain of the foreign affiliate provisions in Bill C-28. These deadline extensions are provided for in the amendments to paragraphs 26(35)(b) and (42)(b), and subsections 26(38), (40), (44), (45) and (46) [amending respectively the in-force rules for 95(2)(a)(ii), 95(2)(n), 95(2)(u), 95(2.2) [with 95(2.21)], 95(3), 95(3.1) [with 95(2)(a.1)] and the Global Section 95 Election—ed.]

(a) before the earlier of

(i) the time at which the particular affiliate became, as determined without reference to subsection (2.2), a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer had a qualifying interest or to which the taxpayer is related, and

(ii) the time at which the particular affiliate became, as determined without reference to subsection (2.2), a foreign affiliate of another person resident in Canada in respect of which the other person resident in Canada had a qualifying interest or to which the other person resident in Canada is related, where

(D) the other person resident in Canada was, immediately before that disposition, related to the taxpayer; or

Dept. of Finance news release 2008-048, June 27, 2008: Government of Canada Eases Tax Compliance Burden for Internationally-Engaged Canadian Businesses

The Honourable Jim Flaherty, Minister of Finance, today proposed changes to the Income Tax Act for Canadian businesses with foreign affiliates and those that report earnings in a foreign currency.

"Our government is committed to creating a corporate tax system that is both fair and internationally competitive," said Minister Flaherty. "The proposals I am announcing today will improve the tax system and will assist Canadian businesses in complying with the tax law."

Foreign Affiliates

Bill C-28, the second Budget 2007 implementation bill, provided substantial tax relief for Canadian businesses, including the historic corporate income tax rate reductions announced in the 2007 Economic Statement. In addition, the bill, which received Royal Assent on December 14, 2007, implemented a number of amendments to the Income Tax Act relating to foreign affiliates.

Included in the bill were provisions which allow taxpayers to elect retroactive application of some of these foreign affiliate amendments. However, in response to concerns that the deadline for filing these elections is too tight — for example, a taxpayer with a December 31, 2007 year-end must file these elections by June 30, 2008 — the Government is proposing to extend the filing deadline for these elections by 18 months. These proposals are set out in more detail in the attached annex.

[The functional currency proposals were enacted in s. 261 — ed.]

Annex

Foreign Affiliates

Bill C-28, which received Royal Assent on December 14, 2007, included a number of amendments to the Income Tax Act that implement various foreign affiliate proposals announced in Budget 2007 as well as related foreign affiliate proposals announced on February 27, 2004.

In this context, Bill C-28 contains a one-time election (commonly referred to as the "Global Election") which allows taxpayers to elect retroactive application of a block of foreign affiliate amendments. In addition to the Global Election, there are various other foreign affiliate amendments in Bill C-28 that allow for separate one-time elections. In the case of both of the Global Election and the separate elections, the elections apply to all foreign affiliates of the particular taxpayer.

As enacted, Bill C-28 requires that a taxpayer wishing to make the Global Election or a separate election must do so by filing the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which the bill received Royal Assent. Since corporate filing-due dates are generally six months after year-end, this means that a taxpayer with a December 31, 2007 year-end must file these elections by June 30, 2008.

The Government has received comments from stakeholders, in respect of both the Global Election and the separate elections, expressing concern with the current election deadline. To address these concerns, it is proposed that the filing deadline for both the Global Election and the separate elections be extended by 18 months.

[The functional currency proposals were enacted in s. 261 — ed.]

(d) paragraph 95(2)(g) of the Act, as enacted by subsection (13), being read in the manner described in subsection (37), also applies to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994 and before December 21, 2002; and

(e) paragraph 95(2)(i) of the Act, as enacted by subsection (14), as required by subsection (28) to be read, in respect of settlements and extinguishments of debt held by a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that occur before October 2, 2007 in taxation years, of the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002, also applies in respect of settlements and extinguishments of debt held by a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that occur in taxation years, of the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994 and before December 21, 2002.

(47) If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this subsection, be a valid election under subsection (46) and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which this Act is assented to, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this subsection, never to have been made.

Proposed Amendment — Revocation of election permitted

Application: The December 18, 2009 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 9(9), will amend subsec. 26(48) of the Budget and Economic Statement Implementation Act, 2007 (Bill C-28, S.C. 2007, c. 35) to read:

(47) If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this subsection, be a valid election under any of paragraph (35)(b), subsections (38) and (40), paragraph (42)(b) and subsections (44) to (46) and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes December 14, 2010, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this subsection, never to have been made.

Technical Notes: Third, the scope of the revocation option is being broadened. Currently the so-called "global election" can be revoked by the filing-due-date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes December 14, 2010. Although the latter date is not being changed, this revocation option is being made applicable to the 6 other foreign affiliate elections as well [95(2)(a)(ii), 95(2)(n), 95(2)(u), 95(2.2) [with 95(2.21)], 95(3), 95(3.1) [with 95(2)(a.1)] — ed.], by virtue of an amendment to subsection 26(47) [of Bill C-28, S.C. 2007, c. 35 — ed.].

(48) Notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election referred to in any of subsections (35), (38), (40), (42) and (44) to (46), or a revocation referred to in subsection (47), into account.

Proposed Amendment — Late reassessment at taxpayer's option

Application: The December 18, 2009 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 9(10), will amend subsec. 26(48) of the Budget and Economic Statement Implementation Act, 2007 (Bill C-28, S.C. 2007, c. 35) to read:

(48) Any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that ends before Dec. 14, 2007 and would otherwise be precluded because of 152(4)–(5) shall be made to the extent necessary to take the above election or revocation into account

(a) an election made by the taxpayer under any of subsections (35), (38), (40), (42) and (44) to (46) [re ITA 95(2)(a)(ii), 95(2)(n), 95(2)(u), 95(2.2) [with 95(2.21)], 95(3), 95(3.1) [with 95(2)(a.1)] and the Global Section 95 Election — ed.] or a revocation referred to in subsection (47) [see Proposed Amendment above — ed.] or any provision of this section in respect of which an election is made under any of those subsections by the taxpayer; or

(b) subsection 10(3) [amending 17(15) "controlled foreign affiliate" — ed.] or any provision of this section [all other amendments to s. 95 — ed.] (other than any provision referred to in paragraph (a) in respect of which the taxpayer has made an election referred to in paragraph (a)), if the taxpayer

(i) elects in writing in respect of all of its foreign affiliates that this subsection apply in respect of that provision; and

(ii) files that election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before June 30, 2011.

Technical Notes: Fourth, subsection 26(48) of Bill C-28 [S.C. 2007, c. 35 — ed.] is being amended. Subsection 26(48) currently provides for an override of the normal statute-barring provisions of subsections 152(4) to (5) of the Income Tax Act in order to take into account the 7 elections referred to above. However, some foreign affiliate provisions of Bill C-28 have automatic, i.e. non-elective, application to periods that may be statute-barred. Thus, subsection 26(48) is being amended to also provide for the override of the normal statute-barring provisions of the Income Tax Act for any non-elective provision of section 26 of Bill C-28, as well as its subsection 10(3), at the option of the taxpayer. To avail itself of this option, the taxpayer must file an election on or before June 30, 2011.

Proposed Addition — 96(1.01)

(1.01) Income allocation to former member — If, at any time in a fiscal period of a partnership, a taxpayer ceases to be a member of the partnership

(a) for the purposes of subsection (1) and sections 34.1, 34.2, 101, 103 and 249.1, and notwithstanding paragraph 98.1(1)(d), the taxpayer is deemed to be a member of the partnership at the end of the fiscal period; and

(b) for the purposes of the application of paragraph (2.1)(b) and subparagraphs 53(1)(e)(i) and (viii) and (2)(c)(i) to the taxpayer, the fiscal period of the partnership is deemed to end

- (i) immediately before the time at which the taxpayer is deemed by subsection 70(5) to have disposed of the interest in the partnership, where the taxpayer ceased to be a member of the partnership because of the taxpayer's death; and
- (ii) immediately before the time that is immediately before the time that the taxpayer ceased to be a member of the partnership, in any other case.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 91(1), will add subsec. 96(1.01), applicable in respect of a taxpayer, in the case where the taxpayer ceases to be a member of a partnership because of the taxpayer's death, to 2003 et seq.; and in any other case, to 1995 et seq.

Technical Notes: New subsection 96(1.01) generally applies to the 1995 and subsequent taxation years. Paragraph 96(1.01)(a) deems a taxpayer who is a former member of a partnership to be a member at the end of the fiscal period in which the taxpayer ceased to be a member, for the purpose of allocating partnership income or loss for that period. This new provision clarifies that, although a taxpayer may have ceased to be a member of a partnership before the end of the partnership's fiscal period, an amount of the income or loss of the partnership is allocable to the taxpayer under subsection 96(1). The amount so allocated is relevant to certain calculations relating to partnership income or loss, including the calculation of the adjusted cost base of the former member of the partnership immediately before the taxpayer ceased to be member.

New subsection 96(1.01) applies notwithstanding the rule in paragraph 98.1(1)(d) that would otherwise deem a former partnership member with a residual interest not to be a member of the partnership for the purposes of certain provisions of the Act.

New paragraph 96(1.01)(a) does not require that partnership income or loss be calculated immediately after a member leaves the partnership. The income or loss allocation, including that of the former member, continues to be calculated after the end of the partnership's fiscal period. In some circumstances the fiscal period of a partnership may end in a taxation year of the former member that is after the taxation year in which the partnership interest was disposed of. It is, therefore, possible that a member will not be required to report a partnership income allocation until the taxation year following that in which a capital gain or loss on the disposition of the partnership interest is required to be reported.

New paragraph 96(1.01)(b) clarifies that an income or loss allocation for the "stub period" during which a taxpayer was a member is included in the calculation of the adjusted cost base of the partnership interest at the time the former member disposes of the interest or a residual interest. The income or loss allocation will affect the calculation of a capital loss under paragraph 98.1(1)(c) or subsection 100(2). Subsection 96(1.01) may ameliorate certain situations where, under the existing provisions of the Act, a former member may have been required to report a capital gain in the year that the person left the partnership, only to be offset by a capital loss in a subsequent year.

Example

Ms. Brown was a partner in XYZ Partnership until June 30. The fiscal period of the partnership ends December 31. The adjusted cost base of her partnership interest on January 1 was Nil. From January to June 30 she withdrew $16,000 in capital.

Just before the end of the partnership's fiscal period, all the partners agree that Ms. Brown's share of income for the period was $20,000. On December 30 she was paid $4,000 in satisfaction of her residual interest.

A summary of Ms. Brown's adjusted cost base is as follows:

	Adjusted Cost Base
January 1, Year 1:	Nil
January 31, Drawings	$16,000	<16,000>
Retirement of Ms. Brown, June 30
December 30 —
— Share of income for 6 months	20,000	4,000
— Payout of rights to equity	4,000	Nil
December 31 — Fiscal period ends	12 to business began

In the result, Ms. Brown is allocated $20,000 income under subsection 96(1.01). The adjusted cost base of her interest immediately before she retired on June 30 was $4,000 (i.e., $20,000 less $16,000). She is deemed by paragraph 98.1(1)(b) to have disposed of her residual interest on December 31 for proceeds of disposition of $4,000, such that she has no capital gain or loss on the disposition.

Subparagraph 53(1)(e)(v) requires that "rights or things" (referred to in subsection 70(2)) in respect of the partnership interest of a deceased partner be included in the adjusted cost base of the partnership interest of the deceased. This provision is no longer relevant to income of the partnership to which a partner is entitled at the time of death, since new subsection 96(1.01) applies to the allocation of partnership income for the fiscal period in which the taxpayer dies. However, subparagraph 53(1)(e)(v) continues to apply in respect of other rights or things, if any, to which the deceased taxpayer is entitled through the partnership that are required to be included in the income of the deceased taxpayer under subsection 70(2).

Proposed Amendment — Election that 96(1.7) not apply for 2000

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 91(5), will enact the transitional rule below for subsec. 96(1.7):

91. (5) If a taxpayer, who is a member of a partnership at the end of a particular fiscal period, of the partnership, that ends in the taxpayer's 2000 taxation year, so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year in which this Act [Bill C-10] is assented to,

(a) subsection 96(1.7) of the Act does not apply to the taxpayer's 2000 taxation year;

(b) the taxpayer is deemed to have a capital gain, a capital loss or a business investment loss in respect of the partnership for the particular fiscal period equal to the amount of the taxable capital gain, the allowable capital loss or the allowable business investment loss in respect of the partnership for the particular fiscal period, as the case may be, multiplied by the reciprocal of the fraction in paragraph 38(a) of the Act that applies to the partnership for the particular fiscal period;

(c) the amount of a capital gain, a capital loss or a business investment loss determined under paragraph (b) is deemed to be a capital gain, a capital loss or a business investment loss, as the case may be, of the taxpayer from a disposition of a capital property on the day that the particular fiscal period ends; and

(d) except as provided by this subsection, no amount shall be included in computing the taxpayer's taxable capital gains, allowable capital losses and allowable business investment losses in respect of the taxable capital gains, allowable capital losses and allowable business investment losses of the partnership for the particular fiscal period.

Technical Notes: The calculation of the capital gains inclusion rate of a taxpayer for the 2000 taxation year takes into account the net capital gains or losses of the taxpayer for the year 2000 other than those allocated by a partnership. It is the inclusion rate of the taxpayer, determined without reference to the allocated partnership gains, that is applied to the taxpayer's share of the partnership gains in determining the taxable capital gains of the taxpayer derived from the partnership capital gains. As a result, taxpayers with different inclusion rates report different amounts of taxable capital gains in respect of capital gains allocated to the taxpayer by a partnership.

Subclause 91(5) of the Income Tax Amendment Act, 2006 introduces a special transitional rule under which members of a partnership may elect to treat capital gains and losses allocated to them by a partnership as their own capital gains and losses for the purpose of calculating the taxpayer's capital gains inclusion rate for the year 2000. The gains and losses will be considered to have been realized by the taxpayer on the day on which the fiscal period of the partnership ends.

If a taxpayer so elects, subsection 96(1.7) will not apply. The taxpayer will be deemed to have realized (on the day on which the fiscal period of the partnership ends in the taxpayer's 2000 taxation year) a capital gain, a capital loss or a business investment loss in respect of the partnership equal to the amount of the taxable capital gain, the allowable capital loss or the allowable business investment loss, as the case may be, of the partnership allocated to the taxpayer, multiplied by the reciprocal of the fraction in paragraph 38(a) that applied to the partnership for the particular fiscal period. Where the inclusion rate for the partnership cannot be determined, the rules in subsection 96(1.7) apply to determine the inclusion rate of the partnership. This capital gain, capital loss or business investment loss is deemed to be a capital gain, capital loss or business investment loss, as the case may be, of the taxpayer from a disposition of a capital property on the day that the particular fiscal period ends.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 96.

(1.71) Application — Where the fraction referred to in the description of C in subsection (1.7) cannot be determined by a taxpayer in respect of a fiscal period of a partnership that ended before February 28, 2000, or includes February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000, for the purposes of subsection (1.7), the fraction is deemed to be

(a) where the fiscal period ended before or began before February 28, 2000, $\frac{3}{4}$;

(b) where the fiscal period began after February 27, 2000 and before October 18, 2000, $\frac{2}{3}$; and

(c) in any other case, $\frac{1}{2}$.

History: Subsec. 96(1.71) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 74(4), applicable to fiscal periods that begin after 2000.

(1.8) Loan of property — For the purposes of subsection 56(4.1) and sections 74.1 and 74.3, where an individual has transferred or lent property, either directly or indirectly, by means of a trust or by any other means whatever, to a person and the property or property substituted therefor is an interest in a partnership, the person's share of the amount of any income or loss of the partnership for a fiscal period in which the person was a specified member of the partnership shall be deemed to be income or loss, as the case may be, from the property or substituted property.

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the taxpayer's at-risk amount in respect of the partnership at the end of the fiscal period

exceeds the total of

(ii) the amount required by subsection 127(8) in respect of the partnership to be added in computing the investment tax credit of the taxpayer for the taxation year,

(c) not be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the year,

(d) not be included in computing the taxpayer's non-capital loss for the year, and

(e) be deemed to be the taxpayer's limited partnership loss in respect of the partnership for the year.

(2.3) Idem — For the purposes of subsection (2.2), where a taxpayer has acquired the taxpayer's partnership interest at any time from a transferor other than the partnership, the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of that interest shall be computed as if the cost to the taxpayer of the interest were the lesser of

- (a) the taxpayer's cost otherwise determined, and
- (b) the greater of
 - (i) the adjusted cost base of that interest to the transferor immediately before that time, and
 - (ii) nil,

and where the adjusted cost base of the transferor cannot be determined, it shall be deemed to be equal to the total of the amounts determined in respect of the taxpayer under paragraphs (2.2)(c) and (d) immediately after that time.

(2.4) Limited partner — For the purposes of this section and sections 111 and 127, a taxpayer who is a member of a partnership at a particular time is a limited partner of the partnership at that time if the member's partnership interest is not an exempt interest (within the meaning assigned by subsection (2.5)) at that time and if, at that time or within 3 years after that time,

- (a) by operation of any law governing the partnership arrangement, the liability of the member as a member of the partnership is limited (except by operation of a provision of a statute of Canada or a province that limits the member's liability only for debts, obligations and liabilities of the partnership, or any member of the partnership, arising from negligent acts or omissions or misconduct that another member of the partnership or an employee, agent or representative of the partnership commits in the course of the partnership business while the partnership is a limited liability partnership);

Proposed Amendment — 96(2.4)(a)

- (a) by operation of any law governing the partnership arrangement, the liability of the member as a member of the partnership is limited (except by operation of a provision of a statute of Canada or a province that limits the member's liability only for debts, obligations and liabilities of the partnership, or any member of the partnership, arising from negligent acts or omissions, from misconduct or from fault of another member of the partnership or an employee, an agent or a representative of the partnership in the course of the partnership business while the partnership is a limited liability partnership);

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 91(2), will amend para. 96(2.4)(a) to read as above, applicable after June 20, 2001.

Technical Notes: Subsection 96(2.4) provides an extended definition of "limited partner" for the purpose of applying the limited partnership at-risk rules in subsection 96(2.2).

Paragraph 96(2.4)(a) provides that a member of a partnership is a "limited partner" if, by operation of law governing the partnership agreement, the liability of the member as a member is limited. However, paragraph 96(2.4)(a) does not apply in cases where a member's liability is limited by operation of a statutory provision of Canada or of a province that limits the member's liability only for the debts, obligations and liabilities of a limited liability partnership (or of any member of the partnership) arising from negligent acts or omissions of another member of the partnership (or of an employee, agent or representative of the partnership) in the course of the partnership business and while the partnership is a limited liability partnership.

The Province of Quebec has amended its legislation concerning partnerships to allow partners to carry on their activities within a limited liability partnership. That legislation refers to the civil law concept of "faute/fautes". The English version of paragraph 96(2.4)(a) does not refer to the civil law concept of "fault" and is amended to do so, effective after June 20, 2001.

Proposed Amendment — 96(2.4)(a) — ACB adjustment

Letter from Dept. of Finance, July 11, 2003: See under 40(3.1).

- (b) the member or a person not dealing at arm's length with the member is entitled, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently, to receive an amount or to obtain a benefit that would be described in paragraph (2.2)(d) if that paragraph were read without reference to subparagraphs (ii) and (vi);

(c) one of the reasons for the existence of the member who owns the interest

(i) can reasonably be considered to be to limit the liability of any person with respect to that interest, and

(ii) cannot reasonably be considered to be to permit any person who has an interest in the member to carry on that person's business (other than an investment business) in the most effective manner; or

(d) there is an agreement or other arrangement for the disposition of an interest in the partnership and one of the main reasons for the agreement or arrangement can reasonably be considered to be to attempt to avoid the application of this subsection to the member.

Subsec. 96(2.4) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 123(5), applicable to fiscal periods that end after November 1994. The subsec. formerly read:

(2.4) For the purposes of this section and sections 111 and 127, a taxpayer who is a member of a partnership at a particular time is a limited partner of that partnership at that time if the taxpayer's partnership interest is not an exempt interest at that time (within the meaning assigned by subsection (2.5)) and if, at that time or within three years after that time,

(a) by operation of any law which governs the partnership arrangement, the liability of the taxpayer in the taxpayer's capacity as a member of the partnership, is limited;

(b) the taxpayer or a person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length is entitled to receive an amount or obtain a benefit that would be described in paragraph (2.2)(d) if it were read without reference to subparagraphs (2.2)(d)(ii) and (vi);

(c) one of the reasons for the existence of the taxpayer who owns the interest

(i) may reasonably be considered to be to limit the liability of any other person with respect to that interest, and

(ii) may not reasonably be considered to be to permit any person who has an interest in the taxpayer to carry on that person's business (other than an investment business) in the most effective manner; or

(d) there is an agreement or other arrangement for the disposition of an interest in the partnership and one of the main reasons for the agreement or arrangement may reasonably be considered to be to attempt to avoid the application of this subsection to the taxpayer.

- (a) the amount was used by the partnership to make an expenditure required to be made pursuant to the terms of a written agreement entered into by it before February 26, 1986, or to repay a loan, debt or contribution of capital that had been received or incurred in respect of any such expenditure,

(b) the amount was raised pursuant to the terms of a prospectus, preliminary prospectus or registration statement filed before February 26, 1986 with a public authority in Canada pursuant to and in accordance with the securities legislation of Canada or of any province, and, where required by law, accepted for filing by that public authority, or

(c) the amount was used for the activity that was carried on by the partnership on February 25, 1986 but was not used for a significant expansion of the activity and, for the purposes of this subsection,

(d) a partnership in respect of which paragraph (b) applies shall be considered to have been actively carrying on a business on a regular and a continuous basis immediately before February 26, 1986 and continuously thereafter until the earlier of the closing date, if any, stipulated in the document referred to that paragraph and January 1, 1987, and

(e) an expenditure shall not be considered to have been required to be made pursuant to the terms of an agreement where the obligation to make the expenditure is conditional in any way on the consequences under this Act relating to the expenditure and the condition has not been satisfied or waived before June 12, 1986.

Related Provisions: 248(10) — Series of transactions.

(2.7) Idem — For the purposes of paragraph (2.2)(a), where at any time a taxpayer makes a contribution of capital to a partnership and the partnership or a person or partnership with whom or which the partnership does not deal at arm's length makes a loan to the taxpayer or to a person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length or repays the contribution of capital, and it is established, by subsequent events or otherwise, that the loan or repayment, as the case may be, was made as part of a series of loans or other transactions and repayments, the contribution of capital shall be deemed not to have been made to the extent of the loan or repayment, as the case may be.

Technical Notes [foreign investment entities, now withdrawn]: Subsection 96(3) provides rules that apply if a member of a partnership makes an election under certain provisions of the Act for a purpose that is relevant to the computation of the member's income from the partnership. In such a case, the election will be valid only if it is made on behalf of all the members of the partnership and the member had authority to act for the partnership.

History: Subsec. 96(8) added by 1994, c. 21, s. 44, applicable to a particular partnership where a person or partnership becomes a member of the particular partnership after December 21, 1992, or where a member of the particular partnership becomes resident in Canada after August 30, 1993, except that before May 1994, the subsec. shall be read without reference to para. Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 1 — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 20(4), will amend subsec. 96(9) to read as above, applicable to fiscal periods that begin after June 22, 2000.

Technical Notes: Subsection 96(8) provides rules that apply where, at a particular time, a Canadian resident becomes a member of a partnership, or a person who is a member of such a partnership becomes a resident of Canada. Where, immediately before the particular time no member of the partnership was resident in Canada, these rules apply in computing the income of the partnership for fiscal periods ending after the particular time. In general terms, the rules in subsection 96(8) are designed to prevent losses accrued while a partnership had no Canadian resident partners from being used to reduce Canadian income tax liabilities.

Subsection 96(9) provides that, where one of the main reasons that there is a member of the partnership who is resident in Canada is to avoid the application of subsection 96(8), that member will, for the purpose of applying subsection 96(8), be considered not to be resident in Canada.

Subsection 96(9) is amended to provide an explicit "look-through" rule for the purposes of subsection 96(8) so that members of partnerships may be identified through one or more tiers of partnerships that are members of other partnerships. Amended subsection 96(9) is consistent with new subsection 94.2(8).

History: Subsec. 96(9) added by 1994, c. 21, s. 44, applicable to a particular partnership where a person or partnership becomes a member of the particular partnership after December 21, 1992, or where a member of the particular partnership becomes resident in Canada after August 30, 1993.

99. (1) Fiscal period of terminated partnership — Except as provided in subsection (2), where, at any time in a fiscal period of a partnership, the partnership would, but for subsection 98(1), have ceased to exist, the fiscal period shall be deemed to have ended immediately before that time.

Proposed Amendment — 99(1)

(1) Fiscal period of terminated partnership — Subject to subsection (2), if, at any particular time in a fiscal period of a partnership, the partnership would, if this Act were read without reference to subsection 98(1), have ceased to exist, the fiscal period is deemed to have ended immediately before the time that is immediately before that particular time.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), s. 92, will amend subsec. 99(1) to read as above, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: Subsection 99(1) provides that, generally, a fiscal period of a partnership is considered to end immediately before the particular time that the partnership ceases to exist. In order to accommodate the calculation of adjusted cost base immediately before the particular time, under section 53, subsection 99(1) is amended to provide that fiscal period of a partnership is considered to end immediately before the time that is immediately before the particular time.

(2) Fiscal period of terminated partnership for individual member — Where an individual was a member of a partnership that, at any time in a fiscal period of a partnership, has or would have, but for subsection 98(1), ceased to exist, for the purposes of computing the individual's income for a taxation year the partnership's fiscal period may, if the individual so elects and subsection 249.1(4) does not apply in respect of the partnership, be deemed to have ended immediately before the time when the fiscal period of the partnership would have ended if the partnership had not so ceased to exist.

Related Provisions: 96(4)–(7) — Elections.

(4) Idem — An election under subsection (2) is not valid if, for the individual's taxation year in which a fiscal period of the partnership would not, if the election were valid, be deemed to have ended but in which it would otherwise have ended, the individual elects to have applicable the rules set out in the Income Tax Application Rules that apply when two or more fiscal periods of a partnership end in the same taxation year.

(a) $\frac{1}{2}$ of such portion of the taxpayer's capital gain for the year therefrom as may reasonably be regarded as attributable to increases in the value of any partnership property of the partnership that is capital property other than depreciable property,

(b) the whole of the remaining portion of that capital gain.

(2) Gain from disposition of interest in partnership — In computing a taxpayer's gain for a taxation year from the disposition of an interest in a partnership, there shall be included, in addition to the amount thereof determined under subsection 40(1), the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of all amounts required by subsection 53(2) to be deducted in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer, immediately before the disposition, of the interest in the partnership,

(b) the total of

(i) the cost to the taxpayer of the interest in the partnership determined for the purpose of computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of that interest at that time, and

(ii) all amounts required by subsection 53(1) to be added to the cost to the taxpayer of that interest in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of that interest at that time.

(3) Transfer of interest on death — Where by virtue of the death of an individual a taxpayer has acquired a property that was an interest in a partnership immediately before the individual's death (other than an interest to which, immediately before the individual's death, section 98.1 applied) and the taxpayer is not a member of the partnership and does not become a member of the partnership by reason of that acquisition,

(a) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have acquired a right to receive partnership property and not to have acquired an interest in a partnership;

(b) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have acquired the right referred to in paragraph (a) at a cost equal to the amount determined to be the proceeds of disposition of the interest in the partnership to the deceased individual by virtue of paragraph 70(5)(a) or (6)(d), as the case may be; and

(c) section 43 is not applicable to the right.

(4) Loss re interest in partnership — Notwithstanding paragraph 39(1)(b), the capital loss of a taxpayer from the disposition at any time of an interest in a partnership is deemed to be the amount of the loss otherwise determined minus the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which the taxpayer's share of the partnership's loss, in respect of a share of the capital stock of a corporation that was property of a particular partnership at that time, would have been reduced under subsection 112(3.1) if the fiscal period of every partnership that includes that time had ended immediately before that time and the particular partnership had disposed of the share immediately before the end of that fiscal period for proceeds equal to its fair market value at that time.

History: Subsec. 100(4) amended by 1998, c. 19, s. 126, applicable to dispositions that occur after April 26, 1995. The subsec. formerly read:

(4) Notwithstanding paragraph 39(1)(b), the capital loss of a corporation from the disposition at any time of an interest in a partnership shall be deemed to be the amount of the loss otherwise determined minus the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which the corporation's share of the partnership's loss, in respect of a share of the capital stock of a corporation that was property of the partnership at that time, would have been reduced pursuant to subsection 112(3.1) or (4.2) had the fiscal period of the partnership ended immediately before that time and had the partnership disposed of the share immediately before the end of that fiscal period for its fair market value at that time.

(5) Replacement of partnership capital — A taxpayer who pays an amount at any time in a taxation year is deemed to have a capital loss from a disposition of property for the year if

- (a) the taxpayer disposed of an interest in a partnership before that time or, because of subsection (3), acquired before that time a right to receive property of a partnership;
- (b) that time is after the disposition or acquisition, as the case may be;
- (c) the amount would have been described in subparagraph 53(1)(e)(iv) had the taxpayer been a member of the partnership at that time; and
- (d) the amount is paid pursuant to a legal obligation of the taxpayer to pay the amount.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), s. 93, will add subsec. 100(5), applicable to 1995 et seq.

Technical Notes: Section 100 contains rules relevant to the calculation of capital gains and losses in respect of an interest in a partnership. There may be circumstances under which a former member of a partnership or an heir of a deceased member is required to pay an amount to the partnership to cover a deficit in the former member's equity account. Such a situation could arise, for instance, where the partnership has a net loss for the partnership's fiscal period in which the taxpayer ceased to be a member. The former member may have been deemed to have realized a capital gain under subsection 100(2) upon disposition of the partnership interest, if the former member had at that time a "negative" adjusted cost base under section 54 (if such a negative balance were allowed under that section).

New subsection 100(5), which generally applies to the 1995 and subsequent taxation years, deems a taxpayer to have a capital loss from the payment by the taxpayer of an amount after the time of disposition of the partnership interest, if that amount would have been a capital contribution to the partnership if the taxpayer had still been a member at the time of the payment. The loss is available to the former member or to an heir who has been deemed by subsection 100(3) to have acquired a right to acquire partnership property.

Example

Mr. Green was a partner in XYZ Partnership until June 30. The fiscal period end of the partnership was December 31. The adjusted cost base of his partnership interest on January 1 was Nil. From January to June 30 he withdrew $16,000 in capital.

Shortly after the fiscal period end, all the partners agree that Mr. Green's share of the partnership loss for the period was $20,000. During the following year he paid $36,000 owing by him to the partnership in satisfaction of his obligation.

A summary of Mr. Green's adjusted cost base is as follows:

January 1, Year 1	Nil
January 31, Drawings	$16,000	<16,000>
Retirement of Mr. Green, June 30
December 31, Year 1
Share of loss for 6 months	<20,000>	<36,000>
March 31 — Repayment of partnership capital	36,000	Nil

Mr. Green is entitled to claim a partnership loss of $20,000 for the taxation year in which he retired ("Year 1"). He had a $36,000 "negative" adjusted cost base for his partnership interest as at the time that he left the partnership, giving rise to a deemed capital gain under subsection 100(2) for Year 1. However, he will be allowed a $36,000 capital loss under subsection 100(5) for the taxation year in which he repaid the deficit.

101. Disposition of farmland by partnership — Where a taxpayer was a member of a partnership at the end of a taxation year of the partnership in which the partnership disposed of land used in a farming business of the partnership, there may be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxpayer's taxation year in which the taxation year of the partnership ended, $\frac{1}{2}$ of the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of that taxation year of the taxpayer or any preceding taxation year of the taxpayer ending after 1971, equal to the taxpayer's loss, if any, for the year from the farming business, to the extent that the loss

- (a) was, by virtue of section 31, not deductible in computing the taxpayer's income for the year;
- (b) was not deducted for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's taxable income for the taxpayer's taxation year in which the partnership's taxation year in which the land was disposed of ended, or for any preceding taxation year of the taxpayer;
- (c) did not exceed that proportion of the total of

(i) taxes (other than income or profits taxes or taxes imposed by reference to the transfer of the property) paid by the partnership in its taxation year ending in the year or payable by it in respect of that taxation year to a province or a Canadian municipality in respect of the property, and

(ii) interest paid by the partnership in its taxation year ending in the year or payable by it in respect of that taxation year, pursuant to a legal obligation to pay interest on borrowed money used to acquire the property or on any amount as consideration payable for the property,

(to the extent that the taxes and interest were included in computing the loss of the partnership for that taxation year from the farming business), that

(iii) the taxpayer's loss from the farming business for the year

(iv) the partnership's loss from the farming business for its taxation year ending in the year; and

(d) did not exceed the remainder obtained when

(i) the total of each of the taxpayer's losses from the farming business for taxation years preceding the year (to the extent that those losses are included in computing the amount determined under this section in respect of the taxpayer)

(ii) twice the amount of the taxpayer's taxable capital gain from the disposition of the land.

(1.1) Restricted meaning of “beneficiary” — Notwithstanding subsection 248(25), for the purposes of subsection (1), paragraph (4)(a.4), subparagraph 73(1.02)(b)(ii) and paragraph 107.4(1)(e), a person or partnership is deemed not to be a beneficiary under a trust at a particular time if the person or partnership is beneficially interested in the trust at the particular time solely because of

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 94(1), will amend the opening words of subsec. 104(1.1) to read as above, applicable to 1998 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 104(1.1) applies for the purpose of identifying beneficiaries under a trust for the purposes of subsection 104(1), subparagraph 73(1.02)(b)(ii) and paragraphs 104(4)(a.4) and 107.4(1)(e).

Subsection 104(1.1) is amended to clarify that it applies notwithstanding subsection 248(25). Subsection 248(25) describes, for other purposes of the Act, the circumstances in which a person or partnership is considered to be "beneficially interested" in a trust.

(a) a right that may arise as a consequence of the terms of the will or other testamentary instrument of an individual who, at the particular time, is a beneficiary under the trust;

(b) a right that may arise as a consequence of the law governing the intestacy of an individual who, at that time, is a beneficiary under the trust;

(c) a right as a shareholder under the terms of the shares of the capital stock of a corporation that, at the particular time, is a beneficiary under the trust;

(d) a right as a member of a partnership under the terms of the partnership agreement, where, at the particular time, the partnership is a beneficiary under the trust; or

(e) any combination of rights described in paragraphs (a) to (d).

History: Subsec. 104(1.1) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 78(1), applicable to 1998 et seq.

(2) Taxed as individual — A trust shall, for the purposes of this Act, and without affecting the liability of the trustee or legal representative for that person's own income tax, be deemed to be in respect of the trust property an individual, but where there is more than one trust and

(a) substantially all of the property of the various trusts has been received from one person, and

(b) the various trusts are conditioned so that the income thereof accrues or will ultimately accrue to the same beneficiary, or group or class of beneficiaries, such of the trustees as the Minister may designate shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be in respect of all the trusts an individual whose property is the property of all the trusts and whose income is the income of all the trusts.

(4) Deemed disposition by trust [every 21 years] — Every trust is, at the end of each of the following days, deemed to have disposed of each property of the trust (other than exempt property) that was capital property (other than excluded property or depreciable property) or land included in the inventory of a business of the trust for proceeds equal to its fair market value (determined with reference to subsection 70(5.3)) at the end of that day and to have reacquired the property immediately after that day for an amount equal to that fair market value, and for the purposes of this Act those days are

(a) where the trust

(i) is a trust that was created by the will of a taxpayer who died after 1971 and that, at the time it was created, was a trust,

(i.1) is a trust that was created by the will of a taxpayer who died after 1971 to which property was transferred in circumstances to which paragraph 70(5.2)(b) or (d) or (6)(d) applied and that, immediately after any such property vested indefeasibly in the trust as a consequence of the death of the taxpayer, was a trust,

Proposed Amendment — 104(4)(a)(i.1) [to be changed or deleted]

(i.1) is a trust that was created by the will of a taxpayer who died after 1971 to which property was transferred in circumstances to which paragraph 70(5.2)(b) or (d) (as that paragraph read in its application to taxation years that began before 2007 or, where sections 94.1 to 94.4 apply to a taxation year of a taxpayer that begins before 2007, as that paragraph read in its application to taxation years of the taxpayer that began before the first day of the first such taxation year) or paragraph (5.2)(c) or (6)(d) applied and that, immediately after any such property vested indefeasibly in the trust as a consequence of the death of the taxpayer, was a trust,

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 1 — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 23(1), will amend subpara. 104(4)(a)(i.1) to read as above, applicable to trust taxation years that begin after 2006, except that it also applies to a taxation year of a trust that begins before 2007 if ss. 94.1 to 94.4 apply to that taxation year of the trust.

Technical Notes [foreign investment entities, now withdrawn]: Subsection 104(4) sets out what is generally referred to as the "21-year deemed realization rule" for trusts. The purpose of subsection 104(4) is to prevent the use of trusts to defer indefinitely the recognition for tax purposes of gains accruing on capital property. Subsection 104(4) generally treats capital property of a trust (other than certain trusts for the benefit of a spouse or common-law partner) as having been disposed of and reacquired by the trust every 21 years at the property's fair market value.

Subparagraph 104(4)(a)(i.1) is amended to apply to a trust to which property is transferred in circumstances to which paragraph 70(5.2)(c) applied. It is also amended to ensure that it continues to apply to a trust to which property was transferred in circumstances to which paragraph 70(5.2)(b) or (d) applied as those paragraphs read in their application to taxation years that began before 2007.

(ii) is a trust that was created after June 17, 1971 by a taxpayer during the taxpayer's lifetime that, at any time after 1971, was a trust, or

(ii.1) is a trust (other than a trust the terms of which are described in clause (iv)(A) that elects in its return of income under this Part for its first taxation year that this subparagraph not apply) that was created after 1999 by a taxpayer during the taxpayer's lifetime and that, at any time after 1999, was a trust

under which

(iii) the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner was entitled to receive all of the income of the trust that arose before the spouse's or common-law partner's death and no person except the spouse or common-law partner could, before the spouse's or common-law partner's death, receive or otherwise obtain the use of any of the income or capital of the trust, or

(iv) in the case of a trust described in subparagraph (ii.1) created by a taxpayer who had attained 65 years of age at the time the trust was created,

(A) the taxpayer was entitled to receive all of the income of the trust that arose before the taxpayer's death and no person except the taxpayer could, before the taxpayer's death, receive or otherwise obtain the use of any of the income or capital of the trust,

(B) the taxpayer or the taxpayer's spouse was, in combination with the spouse or the taxpayer, as the case may be, entitled to receive all of the income of the trust that arose before the later of the death of the taxpayer and the death of the spouse and no other person could, before the later of those deaths, receive or otherwise obtain the use of any of the income or capital of the trust, or

(C) the taxpayer or the taxpayer's common-law partner was, in combination with the common-law partner or the taxpayer, as the case may be, entitled to receive all of the income of the trust that arose before the later of the death of the taxpayer and the death of the common-law partner and no other person could, before the later of those deaths, receive or otherwise obtain the use of any of the income or capital of the trust, the day on which the death or the later death, as the case may be, occurs;

(a.1) where the trust is a pre-1972 spousal trust on January 1, 1993 and the spouse or common-law partner referred to in the definition "pre-1972 spousal trust" in subsection 108(1) in respect of the trust was

(i) in the case of a trust created by the will of a taxpayer, alive on January 1, 1976, and

(ii) in the case of a trust created by a taxpayer during the taxpayer's lifetime, alive on May 26, 1976, the day that is the later of

(iii) the day on which that spouse or common-law partner dies, and

(iv) January 1, 1993;

(a.2) where the trust makes a distribution to a beneficiary in respect of the beneficiary's capital interest in the trust, it is reasonable to conclude that the distribution was financed by a liability of the trust and one of the purposes of incurring the liability was to avoid taxes otherwise payable under this Part as a consequence of the death of any individual, the day on which the distribution is made (determined as if a day ends for the trust immediately after the time at which each distribution is made by the trust to a beneficiary in respect of the beneficiary's capital interest in the trust);

(a.3) where property (other than property described in any of subparagraphs 128.1(4)(b)(i) to (iii)) has been transferred by a taxpayer after December 17, 1999 to the trust in circumstances to which subsection 73(1) applied, it is reasonable to conclude that the property was so transferred in anticipation that the taxpayer would subsequently cease to reside in Canada and the taxpayer subsequently ceases to reside in Canada, the first day after that transfer during which the taxpayer ceases to reside in Canada (determined as if a day ends for the trust immediately after each time at which the taxpayer ceases to be resident in Canada);

(a.4) where the trust is a trust to which property was transferred by a taxpayer who is an individual (other than a trust) in circumstances in which section 73 or subsection 107.4(3) applied, the transfer did not result in a change in beneficial ownership of that property and no person (other than the taxpayer) or partnership has any absolute or contingent right as a beneficiary under the trust (determined with reference to subsection (1.1)), the day on which the death of the taxpayer occurs;

Proposed Addition — 104(4)(a.5)

(a.5) where the trust is deemed by subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada for a taxation year for the purpose of computing the trust's income for the taxation year, the day (in that taxation year) on which, because a contributor (in this paragraph, as defined by subsection 94(1)) either ceases to be resident in Canada or ceases to be a contributor to the trust because of the application at any time of paragraph 94(2)(t), there is no resident contributor (in this paragraph, as defined by subsection 94(1)) to the trust (or the only resident contributors to the trust are entities (in this paragraph, as defined by subsection 94(1)) each of which is an entity the maximum amount recoverable from which under the provisions referred to in paragraph 94(3)(d) is limited to the entities' recovery limits determined under subsection 94(8)), unless subsection 94(5) applies in respect of the contributor ceasing on the day to be a resident contributor to the trust;

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part I — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 23(2), will add para. 104(4)(a.5), applicable to trust taxation years that begin after 2006, and to trust taxation years that begin

(a) after 2000, if the trust makes a valid election under para. (a) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94;

(b) after 2001, if the trust makes a valid election under para. (a) or (b) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94;

(c) after 2002, if the trust makes a valid election under any of paras. (a) to (c) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94;

(d) after 2003, if the trust makes a valid election under any of paras. (a) to (d) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94;

(e) after 2004, if the trust makes a valid election under any of paras. (a) to (e) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94; and

(f) after 2005, if the trust makes a valid election under any of paras. (a) to (f) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 104(4)(a.5) is introduced to provide for a deemed disposition day for a trust that is deemed by subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada for a taxation year for the purpose of computing the trust's income for the year. The deemed disposition day is the day (in that taxation year) on which, because a "contributor" (as defined in subsection 94(1)) to the trust either ceases to be resident in Canada or ceases to be a contributor to the trust because of the application at any time of paragraph 94(2)(t), there is no resident contributor to the trust (or the only resident contributors to the trust are entities each of which is an entity the maximum amount recoverable from which under the provisions referred to in paragraph 94(3)(d) is limited to the entities' recovery limits determined under subsection 94(8)). However, no deemed disposition will occur under paragraph 104(4)(a.5) if subsection 94(5) applies in respect of the contributor ceasing on that day to be a resident contributor of the trust. For more information on section 94, see the commentary on that section.

(b) the day that is 21 years after the latest of

(i) January 1, 1972,

(ii) the day on which the trust was created, and

(iii) where applicable, the day determined under paragraph (a), (a.1) or (a.4) as those paragraphs applied from time to time after 1971; and

(c) the day that is 21 years after any day (other than a day determined under any of paragraphs (a) to (a.4)) that is, because of this subsection, a day on which the trust is deemed to have disposed of each such property.

Proposed Amendment — 104(4)(c)

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part I — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 23(3), will amend para. 104(4)(c) to replace "(a.4)" with "(a.5)", applicable on the same basis as the addition of para. 104(4)(a.5).

Technical Notes: Paragraph 104(4)(c) is amended so that there is not a deemed disposition day for a trust 21 years after any day determined under new paragraph 104(4)(a.5). In effect, the time from which 21 years is counted under paragraph 104(4)(c) is determined without regard to days determined without regard to days determined under any of paragraphs 104(4)(a) to (a.5).

(5) Depreciable property [deemed disposition] — Every trust is, at the end of each day determined under subsection (4) in respect of the trust, deemed to have disposed of each property of the trust (other than exempt property) that was a depreciable property of a prescribed class of the trust for proceeds equal to its fair market value at the end of that day and to have reacquired the property immediately after that day at a capital cost (in this subsection referred to as the "deemed capital cost") equal to that fair market value, except that

(5) Idem [depreciable property] — Every trust shall, at the end of each day determined under subsection (4) in respect of the trust, be deemed to have disposed of each property of the trust that was a depreciable property of a prescribed class of the trust for proceeds equal to its fair market value at the end of that day and to have reacquired the property immediately thereafter at a capital cost (in this subsection referred to as the “deemed capital cost”) equal to that fair market value, except that

Subparas. 104(5)(a)(i) and (ii) substituted by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 46(1), applicable to days determined under subsec. 104(4) that are after 1992. Those subparas. formerly read:

- (i) the capital cost to the trust of the property shall be deemed to be the amount that was the actual capital cost to the trust of the property, and

(6) Deduction in computing income of trust — For the purposes of this Part, there may be deducted in computing the income of a trust for a taxation year

Proposed Amendment — 104(6) opening words

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part I — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 23(5), will amend the opening words of subsec. 104(6) to add "Subject to subsections (7) to (7.1)," applicable on the same basis as subsec. 104(7.01).

Technical Notes: Subsection 104(6) generally permits a trust to deduct, in computing income for a taxation year, any income payable to a beneficiary under the trust.

Subsection 104(6) is amended so that it is expressly subject to subsections 104(7) to 104(7.1).

(a) in the case of an employee trust, the amount by which the amount that would, but for this subsection, be its income for the year exceeds the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is its income for the year from a business

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is its loss for the year from a business;

(a.1) in the case of a trust governed by an employee benefit plan, such part of the amount that would, but for this subsection, be its income for the year as was paid in the year to a beneficiary;

(a.2) where the taxable income of the trust for the year is subject to tax under this Part because of paragraph 146(4)(c) or subsection 146.3(3.1), the part of the amount that, but for this subsection, would be the income of the trust for the year that was paid in the year to a beneficiary;

(a.3) in the case of an inter vivos trust deemed by subsection 143(1) to exist in respect of a congregation that is a constituent part of a religious organization, such part of its income for the year as became payable in the year to a beneficiary; and

(a.4) in the case of an employee life and health trust, an amount that became payable by the trust in the year as a designated employee benefit (as defined in subsection 144.1(1)); and Application: The February 26, 2010 draft legislation (ELHTs), s. 6, will add para. 104(6)(a.4), applicable after 2009.

Technical Notes: Subsection 104(6) generally permits a trust to deduct, in computing its income for a taxation year, any income payable in the year to a beneficiary under the trust. Paragraphs 104(6)(a) to (a.3) apply to various special kinds of trusts. New paragraph 104(6)(a.4) permits an employee life and health trust to deduct amounts that became payable by it in the year as "designated employee benefits". For more information regarding employee life and health trusts, please refer to the commentary on new section 144.1.

Related Provisions: 111(8) "non-capital loss" (a.1) — Amount under 104(6)(a.4) included in calculation of ELHT's non-capital loss.

(b) in any other case, such amount as the trust claims not exceeding the amount, if any, by which

(i) such part (in this section referred to as the trust's "adjusted distributions amount" for the taxation year) of the amount that, but for

(A) this subsection,

(B) subsections (5.1), (12), and 107(4),

(C) the application of subsections (4), (5) and (5.2) in respect of a day determined under paragraph (4)(a), and

(D) subsection 12(10.2), except to the extent that that subsection applies to amounts paid to a trust described in paragraph 70(6.1)(b) and before the death of the spouse or common-law partner referred to in that paragraph, would be its income for the year as became payable in the year to a beneficiary or was included under subsection 105(2) in computing the income of a beneficiary

exceeds

(ii) where the trust

(A) is a post-1971 spousal or common-law partner trust that was created after December 20, 1991, or

(B) would be a post-1971 spousal or common-law partner trust if the reference in paragraph (4)(a) to "at the time it was created" were read as "on December 20, 1991", and the spouse or common-law partner referred to in paragraph (4)(a) in respect of the trust is alive throughout the year, such part of the amount that, but for

(C) this subsection,

(D) subsections (12) and 107(4), and

(iii) where the trust is an alter ego trust, a joint spousal or common-law partner trust, a trust to which paragraph (4)(a.4)

applies or a post-1971 spousal or common-law partner trust and the death or the later death, as the case may be, referred to in paragraph (4)(a) in respect of the trust occurred on a day in the year, the amount, if any, by which

(A) the maximum amount that would be deductible under this subsection in computing the trust's income for the year if this subsection were read without reference to this subparagraph

exceeds the total of

(B) the amount that, but for this subsection and subsections (12), 12(10.2) and 107(4), would be its income that became payable in the year to the taxpayer, spouse or common-law partner referred to in subparagraph (4)(a)(iii), clause (4)(a)(iv)(A), (B) or (C) or paragraph (4)(a.4), as the case may be, and

(iv) where the trust is a SIFT trust for the taxation year, the amount, if any, by which

(A) its adjusted distributions amount for the taxation year exceeds

(B) the amount, if any, by which

exceeds

(II) its non-portfolio earnings for the taxation year.

Proposed Addition — 104(7.01)

(7.01) Trusts deemed to be resident in Canada — If a trust is deemed by subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada for a taxation year for the purpose of computing the trust's income for the year, the maximum amount deductible under subsection (6) in computing its income for the year is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the maximum amount that, if this Act were read without reference to this subsection, would be deductible under subsection (6) in computing its income for the year,

(b) the total of

(i) the portion of the trust's designated income for the year (within the meaning assigned by section 210) that became payable in the year to a non-resident beneficiary under the trust in respect of an interest of the non-resident as a beneficiary under the trust, and

(ii) all amounts each of which is determined by the formula

A is an amount (other than an amount described in subparagraph (i)) that

(A) is paid or credited (having the meaning assigned by Part XIII) in the year to the trust,

(B) would, if this Act were read without reference to subparagraph 94(3)(a)(viii), paragraph 212(2)(b) and sections 216 and 217, be an amount as a consequence of the payment or crediting of which the trust would have been liable to tax under Part XIII, and

(C) becomes payable in the year by the trust to a non-resident beneficiary under the trust in respect of an interest of the non-resident as a beneficiary under the trust, and

(A) 0.35, if the trust can establish to the satisfaction of the Minister that the non-resident beneficiary to whom the amount described in the description of A is payable is resident in a country with which Canada has a tax treaty under which the income tax that Canada may impose on the beneficiary in respect of the amount is limited, and

(B) 0.6, in any other case.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part I — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 23(6), will add subsec. 104(7.01), applicable to trust taxation years that begin after 2006, and to trust taxation years that begin

(a) after 2000, if the trust makes a valid election under para. (a) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94;

(b) after 2001, if the trust makes a valid election under para. (a) or (b) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94;

(c) after 2002, if the trust makes a valid election under any of paras. (a) to (c) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94;

(d) after 2003, if the trust makes a valid election under any of paras. (a) to (d) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94;

(e) after 2004, if the trust makes a valid election under any of paras. (a) to (e) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94; and

(f) after 2005, if the trust makes a valid election under any of paras. (a) to (f) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94.

Technical Notes: Subsection 104(6) generally permits a trust to deduct, in computing income for a taxation year, an amount not exceeding the portion of its income for the year that becomes payable in the year to a beneficiary under the trust. Because of subsection 104(24), trust income is deemed not to have become payable in the year to a beneficiary unless it is paid in the year to the beneficiary or the beneficiary was entitled in the year to enforce payment of the amount.

New subsection 104(7.01) restricts the amount that a trust, that is deemed by subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada (referred to in this commentary as a "subsection 94(3) trust"), can deduct under subsection 104(6) in computing its income in the event that the trust has Canadian-source income and makes distributions to beneficiaries not resident in Canada.

In effect, subsection 104(7.01) acts as a proxy for taxes under Parts XII.2 and XIII of the Act in connection with Canadian-source income earned by a subsection 94(3) trust that has become payable by the trust to its non-resident beneficiaries.

New subsection 94(3) deems a trust to which it applies to be resident in Canada for certain purposes, not including Part XII.2. Accordingly, a trust that is resident in Canada solely because of the deeming provision in subsection 94(3) would generally be non-resident for purposes of Part XII.2. Because of an existing exemption for non-resident trusts in Part XII.2, a tax under that Part does not apply to such a trust.

A subsection 94(3) trust is also exempt from Part XIII withholding obligations on Canadian-source income earned by it that becomes payable by it in the year to non-resident persons.

However, to ensure that subsection 94(3) trusts are not inappropriately used to distribute Canadian-source income free of tax to non-resident beneficiaries, subsection 104(7.01) limits the amount of any trust deduction under subsection 104(6) for such distributions, thereby ensuring the income is subject to Part I tax in the trust.

(It should also be noted that persons that pay or credit an amount to a subsection 94(3) trust are still liable for a withholding obligation under section 215 notwithstanding that the trust itself is exempt from Part XIII tax. This is because new paragraph 94(4)(c) provides that the deemed Canadian residence under subsection 94(3) does not apply for the purposes of determining withholding obligations under section 215. The Canada Revenue Agency will hold the withholding taxes paid and apply them on account of the trust's Part I tax liability, but only to the extent the amount on which Part XIII tax is paid is an amount included in the trust's income. The existing provisions of the Act do not expressly give a Part XIII exemption in this regard to trusts that are subject to existing subsection 94(1). Instead, existing subparagraph 94(1)(c)(ii) allows a tax credit to be claimed by those trusts under section 126 in connection with Part XIII tax on payments made to those trusts.)

As mentioned above, subsection 104(7.01) reduces the maximum deduction under subsection 104(6). More specifically, the amount by which the maximum deduction under subsection 104(6) for a taxation year is reduced under subsection 104(7.01) is equal to the total of:

- the portion of the trust's "designated income" for the year (as defined in Part XII.2) that became payable in the year to a non-resident beneficiary under the trust in respect of an interest of the non-resident as a beneficiary under the trust, and
- all amounts each of which is the product obtained by multiplying a specified factor by each particular amount that is paid or credited in the year to the trust that would, disregarding express provisions to the contrary in the Act, be subject to Part XIII tax and that is payable in the year to a non-resident beneficiary under the trust in respect of an interest of the non-resident as a beneficiary under the trust.

The specified factor in respect of each particular amount described in the second paragraph above is 0.35, if the trust can establish to the satisfaction of the Minister of National Revenue that the non-resident beneficiary to whom the particular amount is payable is resident in a country with which Canada has a tax treaty under which the income tax that Canada may impose on the beneficiary in respect of the amount is limited. In any other case, the specified factor is 0.6.

This amendment applies to trust taxation years that begin after 2006. It also applies to trust taxation years that begin after 2000, after 2001, after 2002 after 2003 after 2004 or after 2005 if the trust makes the appropriate election under the coming-into-force provision for new section 94.

The example below illustrates the operation of new subsection 104(7.01).

Example

1. Trust X is an offshore trust established by Stefan, a long-term resident of Canada. The primary beneficiaries under the trust are Linda (a resident of Canada), Tim (a resident of non-Treatyland) and Bart (a resident of the United States).

2. Trust X receives $1,600 of income in its 2007 taxation year. This income consists of $400 of taxable dividends received from a taxable Canadian corporation. The remaining $1,200 of income is from other sources, none of which is "designated income" (as defined in Part XII.2) of the trust.

3. $1,050 of Trust X's income for 2007 is made payable in the year to Bart. Of this amount, $100 represents the taxable dividends. Trust X makes payable $200 of its income to Tim. Of this amount, $200 represents the taxable dividends. The remaining $350 of the trust's income is made payable in the year to Linda. Of this amount, $100 represents the taxable dividends.

4. Trust X is assumed to have designated the $400 of taxable dividends under subsection 104(19). (Where a designation under subsection 104(19) is available and the designation is made, the designated portion of the dividend income of the trust will, for the purposes of the Act (other than Part XIII), maintain its character, as dividend income, in the hands of the beneficiary.)

Results

1. Because Trust X has a resident contributor at the end of its 2007 taxation year, the trust is deemed by new subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada for the purposes of computing its income.

2. Before taking into account any deduction under subsection 104(6), Trust X's income is $1,600. Note that the $400 in dividends is included in computing the trust's income.

3. Before taking into account new subsection 104(7.01), the maximum deduction under subsection 104(6) is also $1,600.

4. Because of subsection 104(7.01), the maximum deduction under subsection 104(6) is reduced to $1,445 (i.e., $1,600 minus the total of: nil + ((.60 × $200) and (0.35 × $100)).

5. Assuming that the trust claims a deduction of $1,445 under subsection 104(6), the trust would consequently have income of $155. If a tax rate of 42.92% were assumed (i.e., combined federal rates of 29% (because of subsections 122(1) and 117(2) and 13.92% (because of subsection 120(1))), the trust would be liable for Canadian income tax of approximately $67. Note that the trust is exempt from having to collect a Part XIII tax in respect of the amounts made payable to Bart and Tim that are referred to in paragraph 104(7.01)(b) in respect of the trust for the particular taxation year, because these are exempt amounts for the purposes of subparagraph 94(3)(a)(ix). Disregarding this exemption, the Part XIII tax that would have had to have been collected by the trust in respect of the amounts made payable to Bart and Tim would have been $65 (i.e., 25% of $200 and 15% of $100).

(7.1) Capital interest greater than income interest — Where it is reasonable to consider that one of the main purposes for the existence of any term, condition, right or other attribute of an interest in a trust (other than a personal trust) is to give a beneficiary a percentage interest in the property of the trust that is greater than the beneficiary's percentage interest in the income of the trust, no amount may be deducted under paragraph (6)(b) in computing the income of the trust.

(b) it is reasonable to consider that one of the main purposes of the acquisition was to avoid the application of subsection (7.1) in respect of the trust, on a disposition of the right (other than pursuant to the exercise thereof), the interest or the property, there shall be included in computing the income of the taxpayer for the taxation year in which the disposition occurs the amount, if any, by which exceed

(d) the cost amount to the taxpayer of the right, interest or property, as the case may be.

- (b) the taxpayer is in the particular taxation year a beneficiary under the trust;
- (c) the trust is, throughout the particular taxation year, resident in Canada; and
- (d) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount designated, under this subsection, by the trust in respect of a beneficiary under the trust in the trust's return of income under this Part for the particular taxation year is not greater than the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a taxable dividend, received by the trust in the particular taxation year, on a share of the capital stock of a taxable Canadian corporation.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 94(4), will amend subsec. 104(19) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2004 except that, for taxation years that end before July 19, 2005, the reference to "paragraph (13)(a)" in subpara. 104(19)(a)(ii) is to be read as "subsection (13)".

Technical Notes: Subsection 104(19) permits a trust to designate a taxable dividend received by it in a taxation year on the share of a taxable Canadian corporation. Where the designation is made in respect of a beneficiary under the trust, the dividend is treated, for the purposes of the Act (other than Part XIII), as a taxable dividend received by the beneficiary from the corporation, and is treated, for the purposes of the dividend gross-up in paragraph 82(1)(b) and stop-loss rules in paragraphs 107(1)(c) and (d) and section 112, as not having been received by the trust.

Subsection 104(19) is amended to clarify that where a designation, in respect of a taxpayer, is made by a trust in respect of a taxable dividend received by the trust in a particular taxation year of the trust, on a share of the capital stock of a taxable Canadian corporation, the portion of the dividend in respect of which the designation is made is

- for the purposes of paragraphs 82(1)(b) and 107(1)(c) and (d) and section 112, deemed not to have been received by the trust, and
- for the purposes of the Act other than Part XIII, deemed to be a taxable dividend on the share received by the taxpayer in the taxpayer's taxation year in which the particular taxation year of the trust ends.

These deeming rules do not apply, however, unless a number of conditions are met. One of these conditions — that a designated amount not be made in respect of more than one beneficiary under the trust — is replaced with a new requirement that the total of all amounts designated by the trust under subsection 104(19) for the particular taxation year of the trust not exceed the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a taxable dividend received by the trust in the particular taxation year on a share of the capital stock of a taxable Canadian corporation.

The deeming rules under subsection 104(19) apply, in respect of a beneficiary under the trust, only to the portion of the amount, designated under that subsection, that may reasonably be considered (having regard to all the circumstances including the terms and conditions of the trust arrangement) to be part of the amount that, by reason of subsection 104(13) or (14) or section 105, as the case may be, was included in computing the income for a particular taxation year of a beneficiary under the trust. This condition is also amended and now provides that the portion of a taxable dividend designated by a trust is deemed to be a taxable dividend of a taxpayer who is a beneficiary of the trust (and not to be a dividend received by the trust) only if an amount equal to the amount of the designated portion may reasonably be considered (having regard to all the circumstances including the terms and conditions of the trust) to be part of the amount that, because of paragraph 104(13)(a) or subsection 104(14) or section 105, was included in computing the income of that taxpayer (i.e., the taxpayer in respect of whom the amount is designated).

The amended reference in the above rule to paragraph 104(13)(a), instead of subsection 104(13), applies to taxation years that end after July 18, 2005. This change clarifies that the deeming rules do not apply to taxable dividends received by a trust governed by an employee benefit plan and paid to an employer under the plan. This is intended to ensure the appropriate characterization of such amounts for purposes of the rules relating to employee benefit plans. For taxation years that end after February 27, 2004 and on or before July 18, 2005, the referenced provision is subsection 104(13).

History: The closing words of subsec. 104(19) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 78(21), applicable to taxation years that end after 2000. The closing words formerly read:

shall, if so designated by the trust in respect of the beneficiary in the return of its income for the year under this Part, be deemed, for the purposes of this Act, other than Part XIII, not to have been received by the trust and to be a taxable dividend on the share received by the beneficiary in the particular year from the corporation.

Subsec. 104(19) substituted by 1980-81-82-83, c. 140, subsec. 60(6), applicable with respect to designations made after November 12, 1981. Subsec. 104(19) formerly read:

(a) the aggregate of taxable dividends received by a trust in a taxation year on shares of the capital stock of taxable Canadian corporations,

(b) may reasonably be considered (having regard to all the circumstances including the terms and conditions of the trust arrangement) to be part of the amount that, by virtue of subsection (13) or (14) or section 105, as the case may be, was included in computing the income for the year of a particular beneficiary under the trust, and shall, if so designated by the trust in respect of the particular beneficiary in the return of its income for the year under this Part, be deemed, for the purposes of section 82 and this subsection, to be a taxable dividend received by the particular beneficiary in the year from a taxable Canadian corporation, and not to be a taxable dividend received by the trust, in the year from a taxable Canadian corporation.

(c) was not designated by the trust in respect of any other beneficiary thereunder,

(20) Designation in respect of non-taxable dividends

The portion of the total of all amounts, each of which is the amount of a dividend (other than a taxable dividend) paid on a share of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada to a trust during a taxation year of the trust throughout which the trust was resident in Canada, that can reasonably be considered (having regard to all the circumstances including the terms and conditions of the trust arrangement) to be part of an amount that became payable in the year to a particular beneficiary under the trust shall be designated by the trust in respect of the particular beneficiary in the return of the trust's income for the year for the purposes of subclause 53(2)(h)(i.1)(B)(II), paragraphs 107(1)(c) and (d) and subsections 112(3.1), (3.2), (3.31) and (4.2).

History: Subsec. 104(20) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 127(4), applicable after April 26, 1995. Subsec. 104(20) formerly read:

(20) Such portion of the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a dividend (other than a taxable dividend) paid on a share of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada to a trust during a taxation year of the trust throughout which the trust was resident of Canada as may reasonably be considered (having regard to all the circumstances including the terms and conditions of the trust arrangement) to be part of an amount that became payable in the year to a particular beneficiary under the trust, shall be designated by the trust in respect of the particular beneficiary in the return of the trust's income for the year for the purposes of subclause 53(2)(h)(i.1)(B)(II), paragraph 107(1)(c) and subsections 112(3.2) and (4.3).

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-328R3: Losses on shares on which dividends have been received.

(21) Taxable capital gains — Such portion of the net taxable capital gains of a trust for a taxation year throughout which it was resident in Canada as

(a) may reasonably be considered (having regard to all the circumstances including the terms and conditions of the trust arrangement) to be part of the amount that, by virtue of subsection (13) or (14) or section 105, as the case may be, was included in computing the income for the taxation year of

(i) a particular beneficiary under the trust, if the trust is a mutual fund trust, or

(ii) a particular beneficiary under the trust who is resident in Canada, if the trust is not a mutual fund trust, and

(b) was not designated by the trust in respect of any other beneficiary under the trust, shall, if so designated by the trust in respect of the particular beneficiary in the return of its income for the year under this Part, be deemed, for the purposes of sections 3 and 111, except as they apply for the purpose of section 110.6, and subject to paragraph 132(5.1)(b), to be a taxable capital gain for the year of the particular beneficiary from the disposition by that beneficiary of capital property.

Proposed Amendment — 104(21)

(21) Designation in respect of taxable capital gains — For the purposes of sections 3 and 111, except as they apply for the purposes of section 110.6, and subject to paragraph 132(5.1)(b), an amount in respect of a trust's net taxable capital gains for a particular taxation year of the trust is deemed to be a taxable capital gain, for the taxation year of a taxpayer in which the particular taxation year ends, from the disposition by the taxpayer of capital property if

(a) the amount

(ii) may reasonably be considered (having regard to all the circumstances including the terms and conditions of the trust) to be part of the amount that, because of paragraph (13)(a) or subsection (14) or section 105, was included in computing the income for that taxation year of the taxpayer;

(b) the taxpayer is

(i) in the particular taxation year, a beneficiary under the trust, and

(ii) resident in Canada, unless the trust is, throughout the particular taxation year, a mutual fund trust;

(c) the trust is, throughout the particular taxation year, resident in Canada; and

(d) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount designated, under this subsection, by the trust in respect of a beneficiary under the trust in the trust's return of income under this

Part for the particular taxation year is not greater than the trust's net taxable capital gains for the particular taxation year.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 94(5), will amend subsec. 104(21) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2004 except that, for taxation years that end on or before July 18, 2005, the reference to “paragraph (13)(a)” in subpara. 104(21)(a)(ii) is to be read as “subsection (13)”.

Technical Notes: Subsection 104(21) permits a trust to designate, in respect of a beneficiary under the trust, a portion of its net taxable capital gains. Where the designation is made, the amount designated is deemed, for the purposes of sections 3 and 111 (except as they apply for the purposes of determining whether a beneficiary is entitled to claim a capital gains exemption under section 110.6 and subject to paragraph 132(5.1)(b)), to be a taxable capital gain for the year of the beneficiary from the disposition of capital property.

Subsection 104(21) is amended to clarify that where a designation, in respect of a taxpayer, is made by a trust in respect of its net taxable capital gains for a particular taxation year of the trust, the designated amount is deemed to be a taxable capital gain, for the taxation year of the taxpayer in which the particular taxation year ends, from the disposition by the taxpayer of capital property.

The deeming rule does not apply, however, unless a number of conditions are met. One of these conditions — that a designated amount not be made in respect of more than one beneficiary under the trust — is replaced with a new requirement that the total amounts designated under subsection 104(21) by the trust for a particular taxation year of the trust not exceed the trust's net taxable capital gains for the particular taxation year.

The deeming rule under subsection 104(21) applies, in respect of a beneficiary under a trust, only to the portion of the net taxable gains of the trust that may reasonably be considered (having regard to all the circumstances including the terms and conditions of the trust arrangement) to be part of the amount that, by reason of subsection 104(13) or 104(14) or section 105, as the case may be, was included in computing the income of a beneficiary under the trust. This condition is also amended and now provides that an amount, in respect of the trust's net taxable capital gains, is deemed to be a taxable capital gain from the disposition by a taxpayer of capital property only if the amount may reasonably be considered (having regard to all the circumstances including the terms and conditions of the trust) to be part of the amount that, because of paragraph 104(13)(a) or subsection 104(14) or section 105, was included in computing the income of that taxpayer (i.e., the taxpayer in respect of whom the amount is designated).

The amended reference in the above rule to paragraph 104(13)(a), instead of subsection 104(13), applies to taxation years that end after July 18, 2005. This change clarifies that the deeming rule does not apply to employee benefit plan trusts and ensures consistency with amended subsection 104(19). For taxation years that end after February 27, 2004 and on or before July 18, 2005, the referenced provision is subsection 104(13).

Subsection 104(21) is also amended to clarify that the deeming rule does not apply to a designation made by a trust, for a particular taxation year of the trust, in respect of a non-resident beneficiary, unless the trust is a mutual fund trust throughout the particular taxation year.

(21.24) Trusts to designate amounts — A trust shall determine and designate, in its return of income under this part for a designation year of the trust, the following amounts in respect of a beneficiary:

(a) the amount that is, under subsection (21.21), determined to be the beneficiary’s taxable capital gain from the disposition, on or after March 19, 2007, of qualified farm property of the beneficiary,

(b) the amount that is, under subsection (21.22), determined to be the beneficiary’s taxable capital gain from the disposition, on or after March 19, 2007, of qualified small business corporation share of the beneficiary, and

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is an allowable capital loss (other than an allowable business investment loss) of the trust for the year from the disposition of a capital property, and

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 1 — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 23(7), will amend para. 104(21.3)(a) to read as above, applicable to trust taxation years that begin after 2000.

Technical Notes: Subsection 104(21.3) defines the expression “net taxable capital gains”. The expression is used in subsections 104(21) and (21.2), which permit a trust to flow through its taxable capital gains realized in a year to a beneficiary to whom an amount of the trust’s income for the year has been made payable. The trust can flow through its taxable capital gains to beneficiaries only to the extent of its net taxable capital gains for the year.

Under subsection 104(21.3), the amount of a trust’s net taxable capital gains for a taxation year equals the amount, if any, by which its total taxable capital gains for the year exceeds the total of two amounts:

• its total allowable capital losses for the year, and

• the amount deducted by it under paragraph 111(1)(b) in computing its taxable income for the year (i.e., deduction of carried-over net capital losses for preceding years and for the three following years).

Subsection 104(21.3) is amended so that allowable business investment losses (ABILs) are disregarded for the purpose of the first of the two amounts. Accordingly, ABILs will not result in a reduction of taxable capital gains that may be flowed through to beneficiaries under trusts and against which allowable capital losses can be claimed.

(b) the amount, if any, deducted under paragraph 111(1)(b) in computing its taxable income for the year.

(a) the beneficiary is deemed to have realized capital gains (in this subsection referred to as the “deemed gains”) from the disposition of capital property in the beneficiary’s taxation year in which the particular taxation year ends equal to the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount determined when the amount of the allocated gain is divided by the fraction in paragraph 38(a) that applies to the trust for the particular taxation year

exceeds

(ii) the amount claimed by the beneficiary not exceeding the beneficiary’s exempt capital gains balance for the year in respect of the trust;

(b) notwithstanding subsection (21) and except as a consequence of the application of paragraph (a), the amount of the allocated gain shall not be included in computing the beneficiary’s income for the beneficiary’s taxation year in which the particular taxation year ends;

(c) the trust shall disclose to the beneficiary in prescribed form the portion of the deemed gains that are in respect of capital gains realized on dispositions of property that occurred before February 28, 2000, after February 27, 2000 and before October 18, 2000, and after October 17, 2000 and, if it does not do so, the deemed gains are deemed to be in respect of capital gains realized on dispositions of property that occurred before February 28, 2000; and

(d) where a trust so elects under this paragraph in its return of income for the year,

(i) the portion of the deemed gains that are in respect of capital gains from dispositions of property that occurred before February 28, 2000 is deemed to be that proportion of the deemed gains that the number of days that are in the particular year and before February 28, 2000 is of the number of days that are in the particular year,

(ii) the portion of the deemed gains that are in respect of capital gains from dispositions of property that occurred in the year and in the period that began at the beginning of February 28, 2000 and ended at the end of October 17, 2000, is deemed to be that proportion of the deemed gains that the number of days that are in the year and in that period is of the number of days that are in the particular year, and

(iii) the portion of the deemed gains that are in respect of capital gains from dispositions of property that occurred in the year and in the period that begins at the beginning of October 18, 2000 and ends at the end of the particular year, is deemed to be that proportion of the deemed gains that the number of days that are in the year and in that period is of the number of days that are in the particular year; and

(e) no amount may be claimed by the beneficiary under subsection 39.1(3) in respect of the allocated gain.

(a) the portion of the net capital gains or net capital losses that are in respect of capital gains and losses from dispositions of property that occurred before February 28, 2000 is deemed to be that proportion of the net capital gains or net capital losses, as the case may be, that the number of days that are in the year and before February 28, 2000 is of the number of days that are in the year,

(b) the portion of the net capital gains or net capital losses that are in respect of capital gains and losses from dispositions of property that occurred in the year and in the period that began at the beginning of February 28, 2000 and ended at the end of October 17, 2000, is deemed to be that proportion of the net capital gains or net capital losses, as the case may be, that the number of days that are in the year and in that period is of the number of days that are in the year, and

and, for the purpose of this subsection,

(21.4) applies — Where a taxpayer is deemed by subsection (21.4) to have realized capital gains from the disposition of capital property in a taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of dispositions of property by a trust of which the taxpayer is a beneficiary,

(a) if the deemed gains are in respect of capital gains of the trust from dispositions of property before February 28, 2000 and the taxation year of the taxpayer includes February 27, 2000, the deemed gains are deemed to be a capital gain of the taxpayer from the disposition by the taxpayer of capital property in the taxpayer’s taxation year and before February 28, 2000;

(b) if the deemed gains are in respect of capital gains of the trust from dispositions of property before February 28, 2000 and the taxation year of the taxpayer began after February 27, 2000 and ended before October 18, 2000, $\frac{1}{8}$ of the deemed gains is deemed to be a capital gain of the taxpayer from the disposition by the taxpayer of capital property in the taxpayer’s taxation year;

(f.1) if the deemed gains are in respect of capital gains of the trust from dispositions of property after February 27, 2000 and before October 17, 2000 and the taxation year of the taxpayer began after February 27, 2000 and ended after October 17, 2000, the deemed gains are deemed to be a capital gain of the taxpayer from the disposition by the taxpayer of capital property in the taxpayer's taxation year and in the period that began after February 27, 2000 and ended before October 18, 2000;

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 94(6), will add para. 104(21.6)(f.1), applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000.

Technical Notes: Subsection 104(21.6) provides rules for the determination of the inclusion rate to be used by a taxpayer for capital gains realized by a trust in 2000. This subsection applies to a taxpayer who has a taxation year that begins after October 17, 2000 and who is deemed by subsection 104(21.4) to have capital gains from the disposition of capital property in the year in respect of dispositions of property by a trust of which the taxpayer is a beneficiary.

This subsection ensures that the inclusion rate for capital gains realized on property disposed of by a trust prior to February 27, 2000 is $\frac{3}{4}$, and is $\frac{2}{3}$ in respect of property disposed of by a trust after February 27, 2000 and before October 18, 2000.

Subsection 104(21.6) is amended by adding new paragraph (f.1) to ensure that where the deemed gains are in respect of capital gains from dispositions of property by the trust that occurred after February 27, 2000 and before October 17, 2000 in circumstances where the taxation year of the taxpayer began after February 27, 2000 and ended after October 17, 2000, the gains are deemed to be a capital gain of the taxpayer from the disposition by the taxpayer of capital property in the taxpayer's taxation year and in the period that began after February 27, 2000 and ended before October 18, 2000. This amendment applies to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000.

(g) if the deemed gains are in respect of capital gains of the trust from dispositions of property after February 27, 2000 and before October 17, 2000 and the taxation year of the taxpayer began after February 27, 2000 and ended before October 17, 2000, the deemed gains are deemed to be a capital gain of the taxpayer from the disposition by the taxpayer of capital property in the taxpayer's taxation year; and

Proposed Amendment — 104(21.6)(g)

(g) if the deemed gains are in respect of capital gains of the trust from dispositions of property after February 27, 2000 and before October 17, 2000 and the taxation year of the taxpayer began after February 27, 2000 and ended before October 18, 2000, the deemed gains are deemed to be a capital gain of the taxpayer from the disposition by the taxpayer of capital property in the taxpayer's taxation year; and

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 94(6), will amend para. 104(21.6)(g) to read as above, applicable to trust taxation years that end after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 104(21.6)(g) is amended to correct a technical deficiency in a reference to a date. The reference to "October 17, 2000" is changed to "October 18, 2000" which reflects the date on which the reduction of the capital gain inclusion rate from $\frac{2}{3}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ was announced. This amendment applies to trust taxation years that end after December 20, 2002.

(h) in any other case, the deemed gains are deemed to be a capital gain of the taxpayer from the disposition of capital property by the taxpayer in the taxpayer's taxation year and after October 17, 2000.

Related Provisions: 127,52(1)(d)(iii) — 104(21.6) ignored for minimum tax purposes.

History: Subsec. 104(21.6) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 78(23), applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000.

(21.7) Deemed gains [transitional for 2000] — [where] subsec. (21.4) does not apply — Where an amount is designated under subsection (21) in respect of a beneficiary by a trust for a particular taxation year of the trust that ends in a taxation year of the beneficiary that includes February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000 and subsection (21.4) does not apply in respect of the designated amount,

(a) notwithstanding subsection (21) and except as a consequence of the application of paragraph (b), the designated amount shall not be included in computing the beneficiary's income;

(b) the beneficiary is deemed to have a capital gain from the disposition by the beneficiary of capital property on the day on which the particular taxation year ends equal to the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount determined by dividing the designated amount by the fraction in paragraph 38(a) that applies to the trust for the particular taxation year

exceeds

(ii) the amount claimed by the beneficiary, which amount may not be greater than the beneficiary's exempt capital gains balance for the year in respect of the trust; and

(c) no amount may be claimed under subsection 39.1(3) by the beneficiary in respect of the designated amount.

History: Subsec. 104(21.7) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 78(23), applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000.

(22) Designation of foreign source income by trust — For the purposes of this subsection, subsection (22.1) and section 126, such portion of a trust's income for a taxation year (in this subsection referred to as "that year") throughout which it is resident in Canada from a source in a country other than Canada as

(a) can reasonably be considered (having regard to all the circumstances including the terms and conditions of the trust arrangement) to be part of the income that, because of subsection (13) or (14), was included in computing the income for a particular taxation year of a particular beneficiary under the trust, and

(b) is not designated by the trust in respect of any other beneficiary thereunder shall, if so designated by the trust in respect of the particular beneficiary in its return of income under this Part for that year, be deemed to be the particular beneficiary's income for the particular year from that source.

Proposed Amendment — 104(22)

(22) Designation in respect of foreign source income — For the purposes of this subsection, subsection (22.1) and section 126, an amount in respect of a trust's income for a particular taxation year of the trust from a source in a country other than Canada is deemed to be income of a taxpayer, for the taxation year of the taxpayer in which the particular taxation year ends, from that source if

(a) the amount

(ii) may reasonably be considered (having regard to all the circumstances including the terms and conditions of the trust) to be part of the amount that, because of paragraph (13)(a) or subsection (14), was included in computing the income for that taxation year of the taxpayer;

(b) the taxpayer is in the particular taxation year a beneficiary under the trust;

(c) the trust is, throughout the particular taxation year, resident in Canada; and

(d) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount designated, under this subsection in respect of that source, by the trust in respect of a beneficiary under the trust in the trust's return of income under this Part for the particular taxation year is not greater than the trust's income for the particular taxation year from that source.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 94(7), will amend subsec. 104(22) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2004 except that, for taxation years that end on or before July 18, 2005, the reference to “paragraph (13)(a)” in subpara. 104(22)(a)(ii) is to be read as “subsection (13)”.

Technical Notes: Subsection 104(22) permits a trust to designate, in respect of a beneficiary under the trust, an amount of its foreign income. Such a designation is made by the trust on a source-by-source basis. Where the designation is made, the amount designated is deemed, for the purpose of subsections 104(22) and (22.1) and section 126, to be the beneficiary's income for the year from that source.

Subsection 104(22) is amended to clarify that where an amount is designated, in respect of a taxpayer, by a trust in respect of the trust's income for a particular taxation year of the trust from a source in a country other than Canada, the designated amount is deemed to be income of the taxpayer, for the taxation year of the taxpayer in which the particular taxation year of the trust ends, from that source.

The deeming rule does not apply, however, unless a number of conditions are met. One of these conditions — that a designated amount not be made in respect of more than one beneficiary under the trust — is replaced with a new requirement that the total amounts designated, in respect of the trust's income from a particular foreign source, under subsection 104(22) by the trust for a particular taxation year of the trust not exceed the trust's income for the particular taxation year from that source.

The deeming rule under subsection 104(22) applies, in respect of a beneficiary under a trust, only to the portion of the trust's income, from a source in a country other than Canada, that may reasonably be considered (having regard to all the circumstances including the terms and conditions of the trust arrangement) to be part of the amount that, by reason of subsection 104(13) or 104(14) or section 105, as the case may be, was included in computing the income of a beneficiary under the trust. This condition is also amended and now provides that an amount, in respect of the trust's income from a source in a country other than Canada, is deemed to be income, from that source, only if the amount may reasonably be considered (having regard to all the circumstances including the terms and conditions of the trust) to be part of the amount that, because of paragraph 104(13)(a) or subsection 104(14) or section 105, was included in computing the income of that taxpayer (i.e., the taxpayer in respect of whom the amount is designated).

The amended reference in the above rule to paragraph 104(13)(a), instead of subsection 104(13), applies to taxation years that end after July 18, 2005. This change clarifies that the deeming rule does not apply to employee benefit plan trusts and ensures consistency with amended subsection 104(19). For taxation years that end after February 27, 2004 and on or before July 18, 2005, the referenced provision is subsection 104(13).

(23) Testamentary trusts — In the case of a testamentary trust, notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the following rules apply:

(a) the taxation year of the trust is the period for which the accounts of the trust are made up for purposes of assessment under this Act, but no such period may exceed 12 months and no change in the time when such a period ends may be made for the purposes of this Act without the concurrence of the Minister;

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 94(8), will repeal paras. 104(23)(a) and (b), applicable after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 104(23) provides special rules that apply to testamentary trusts. Paragraph 104(23)(a) defines the taxation year of a testamentary trust to be the period for which the accounts of the trust are made up for purposes of assessment under the Act. For this purpose, that paragraph also provides that no such period may exceed 12 months and no change in the time when such a period ends may be made for the purposes of the Act without the concurrence of the Minister of National Revenue. Paragraph 104(23)(b) provides that, in the case of a testamentary trust when a taxation year is referred to by reference to a calendar year, the reference is to the taxation year or years coinciding with, or ending in, that year.

Paragraphs 104(23)(a) and (b) are repealed.

- (i) the individual were another person,
- (ii) the period were a taxation year,

Technical Notes: The determination of when an amount becomes payable in a taxation year is relevant for a number of purposes, including the determination of the amount deductible under subsection 104(6). Under subsection 104(24), an amount is deemed not to have become payable in the year to a beneficiary unless it was paid in the year to the beneficiary or the beneficiary was entitled in the year to enforce payment of the amount.

This amendment applies to trust taxation years that begin after 2002 [now 2006 — ed.]. It also applies to trust taxation years that begin after 2000, or after 2001, if the trust makes the appropriate election under the coming-into-force provision for new section 94.

Application: S.C. 2007, c. 29 (Bill C-52, Royal Assent June 22, 2007), s. 40, states that if former Bill C-10 (see proposed amendment above) receives Royal Assent, subsec. 104(24) is amended to read as above, applicable in respect of taxation years of a trust that begin after 2006.

History: Subsec. 104(29) repealed by 2003, c. 28, subsec. 11(2), applicable to trust taxation years that begin after 2006. Subsec. 104(29) formerly read:

(29) Amounts deemed payable to beneficiaries [resource income] — For the purposes of this section, an amount designated by a trust in its return of income for a taxation year throughout which it was resident in Canada is deemed to have become, in the proportions that the trust designates in that return of income, payable by the trust to particular beneficiaries under the trust in the year if

(a) the designated amount does not exceed the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is

(i) an amount that is not deductible in computing the trust's income for the year, but that would be deductible in computing that income if this Act were read without reference to paragraph 18(1)(m),

(ii) an amount that is required by paragraph 12(1)(o) or by subsection 69(6) or (7) to be included in computing that income, or

(iii) an amount that is required to be included in computing that income because of an amount designated under this subsection by another trust,

B is the total of all amounts each of which is

(i) an amount that is deductible (otherwise than because of the membership of the trust in a partnership) under paragraph 20(1)(v.1) in computing the trust's income for the year, or

(ii) an amount that is not included in computing that income, but that would be included in computing that income if this Act were read without reference to section 80.2,

C is the total of all amounts each of which is a portion of the trust's income for the year computed without reference to the provisions of this Act (in this subsection referred to as the “trust-purpose income of the trust for the year”) that

(i) was payable in the year to a beneficiary under the trust, or

(ii) was required by subsection 105(2) to be included in computing the income of a beneficiary under the trust, and

D is the trust-purpose income of the trust for the year; and

(b) the designated proportions are reasonable having regard to the portions of the trust-purpose income of the trust for the year that are included in computing the beneficiaries' incomes for the year.

Subsec. 104(29) amended by 2003, c. 28, subsec. 11(1), applicable to trust taxation years that end after December 20, 2002. The subsec. formerly read:

(29) Where a trust, in its return of income under this Part for a taxation year throughout which it was resident in Canada, designates an amount not exceeding the proportion of the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that would, but for paragraph 18(1)(l.1) or (m), be deductible in computing the income of the trust for the year or that is required to be included in computing its income for the year by reason of paragraph 12(1)(o) or subsection 69(6) or (7)

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that is deductible (otherwise than because of the membership of the trust in a partnership) under paragraph 20(1)(v.1) in computing the income of the trust for the year or that would, but for section 80.2, be included in computing its income for the year,

(c) the total of all amounts each of which is a part of the income of the trust for the year computed without reference to the provisions of this Act (in this subsection referred to as the “trust-purpose income” for the year) that was payable in the year to a beneficiary of the trust or was included in computing the income of a beneficiary of the trust for the year by virtue of subsection 105(2)

(d) the trust-purpose income of the trust for the year, that designated amount shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to have become payable by the trust to particular beneficiaries of the trust in the year in such proportions as are designated by the trust in that return of income, provided that those proportions are reasonable having regard to the shares of the trust-purpose income of the trust for the year included in computing their incomes for the year.

Para. 104(29)(b) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 42(10), applicable to taxation years ending after December 20, 1991. Para. (b) formerly read:

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deductible in computing the income of the trust for the year under paragraph 20(1)(v.1) or that would, but for section 80.2, be included in computing its income for the year,

107. (1) Disposition by taxpayer of capital interest — Where a taxpayer has disposed of all or any part of the taxpayer's capital interest in a trust,

(a) where the trust is a personal trust or a prescribed trust, for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's capital gain, if any, from the disposition, the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the interest or the part of the interest, as the case may be, immediately before the disposition is, unless any part of the interest has ever been acquired for consideration and, at the time of the disposition, the trust is non-resident, deemed to be the greater of

(i) its adjusted cost base, otherwise determined, to the taxpayer immediately before the disposition, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which

(A) its cost amount to the taxpayer immediately before the disposition

exceeds

(B) the total of all amounts deducted under paragraph 53(2)(g.1) in computing its adjusted cost base to the taxpayer immediately before the disposition;

(b) [Repealed]

(c) where the taxpayer is not a mutual fund trust, the taxpayer's loss from the disposition is deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the amount of that loss otherwise determined exceeds the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which was received or would, but for subsection 104(19), have been received by the trust on a share of the capital stock of a corporation before the disposition (and, where the trust is a unit trust, after 1987) and

(A) where the taxpayer is a corporation,

(I) was a taxable dividend designated under subsection 104(19) by the trust in respect of the taxpayer, to the extent of the amount of the dividend that was deductible under section 112 or subsection 115(1) or 138(6) in computing the taxpayer's taxable income or taxable income earned in Canada for any taxation year, or

(II) was an amount designated under subsection 104(20) by the trust in respect of the taxpayer,

(B) where the taxpayer is another trust, was an amount designated under subsection 104(19) or (20) by the trust in respect of the taxpayer, and

(C) where the taxpayer is not a corporation, trust or partnership, was an amount designated under subsection 104(20) by the trust in respect of the taxpayer

exceeds

(ii) the portion of the total determined under subparagraph (i) that can reasonably be considered to have resulted in a reduction, under this paragraph, of the taxpayer's loss otherwise determined from a previous disposition of an interest in the trust, and

(d) where the taxpayer is a partnership, the share of a person (other than another partnership or a mutual fund trust) of any loss of the partnership from the disposition is deemed to be the amount, if any, by which that loss otherwise determined exceeds the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is a dividend that was received or would, but for subsection 104(19), have been received by the trust on a share of the capital stock of a corporation before the disposition (and, where the trust is a unit trust, after 1987) and

(A) where the person is a corporation,

(I) was a taxable dividend that was designated under subsection 104(19) by the trust in respect of the taxpayer, to the extent of the amount of the dividend that was deductible under section 112 or subsection 115(1) or 138(6) in computing the person's taxable income or taxable income earned in Canada for any taxation year, or

(II) was a dividend designated under subsection 104(20) by the trust in respect of the taxpayer and was an amount received by the person,

(B) where the person is an individual other than a trust, was a dividend designated under subsection 104(20) by the trust in respect of the taxpayer and was an amount received by the person, and

(C) where the person is another trust, was a dividend designated under subsection 104(19) or (20) by the trust in respect of the taxpayer and was an amount received by the person (or that would have been received by the person if this Act were read without reference to subsection 104(19)),

(ii) the portion of the total determined under subparagraph (i) that can reasonably be considered to have resulted in a reduction, under this paragraph, of the person's loss otherwise determined from a previous disposition of an interest in the trust.

Proposed Addition — 107(1)(e)

(e) if the capital interest is not a capital property of the taxpayer, notwithstanding the definition “cost amount” in subsection 108(1), its cost amount is deemed to be the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount that would, if this Act were read without reference to this paragraph and the definition “cost amount” in subsection 108(1), be its cost amount

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts, each of which is an amount in respect of the capital interest that has become payable to the taxpayer before the disposition and that would be described in subparagraph 53(2)(h)(i.1) if that subparagraph were read without reference to its subclause (B)(I).

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 96(1), will add para. 107(1)(e), applicable to dispositions that occur, and valuations made,

(a) after 2001 in respect of a qualified trust unit, as defined in subsec. 260(1), as amended, in respect of which an amount described in para. 260(5.1)(b), as amended, or that would have been so described had no election been made under subsec. 194(10) of former Bill C-10, is paid after 2001 and before February 28, 2004, except that subpara. 107(1)(e)(ii) shall, with respect to amounts described in subcl. 53(2)(h)(i.1)(B)(I) that were payable on or before 2002, be read without reference to the words “if that subparagraph were read without reference to its subclause (B)(I)”; and

(b) in any other case, after February 27, 2004, except that, subject to para. (a),

(i) the amendment does not apply to a disposition by a taxpayer after February 27, 2004 and before 2005 pursuant to an agreement in writing made by the taxpayer on or before February 27, 2004, and

(ii) subpara. 107(1)(e)(ii) shall, with respect to amounts described in subcl. 53(2)(h)(i.1)(B)(I) that were payable on or before February 27, 2004, be read without reference to the words “if that subparagraph were read without reference to its subclause (B)(I)”.

Technical Notes: Subsection 107(1) contains special rules applicable to the disposition of an interest in a trust. A trust can distribute non-taxable amounts, such as returns of capital and the non-taxable portion of a capital gain, to the holders of interests in the trust. Currently, the Act requires a return of capital to be accounted for by reducing the recipient's adjusted cost base of the interest in the trust. While the effect of this general rule is clear where the interest is held as capital property, it is not as clear where the property is held as inventory.

New paragraph 107(1)(e) applies when a taxpayer disposes of an interest in a trust that is not held as capital property. The paragraph deems the taxpayer's cost amount of that interest to be the cost amount used for inventory valuation purposes less the total of all returns of capital and non-taxable capital gains payable to the taxpayer, in respect of the interest, prior to the disposition. This is to recognize that all receipts for a property held on income account should be treated as either income or a reduction in the cost of the property to the holder.

The new paragraph applies to dispositions after 2001 if the trust interest is a qualified security, as defined in subsection 260(1), and an SLA compensation payment or a dealer compensation payment, as defined in subsection 260(1) has been paid in respect of the trust unit after 2001 and before February 27, 2004. Otherwise, the new rule applies to dispositions after February 27, 2004, except that it will not apply to a disposition that took place after February 27, 2004 and before 2005, if the taxpayer had on or before February 27, 2004 entered into an agreement in writing for the disposition of the interest.

There is a further exception to the application of the new paragraph. Distributions of the non-taxable portion of capital gains will reduce the cost amount of an interest in a trust only if those distributions took place after the new paragraph came into effect — that is, in the case of a trust interest that was the subject of a security lending arrangement (SLA) that was made between January 1, 2002 and February 27, 2004, after 2001, and, in all other cases, after February 27, 2004.

History: The opening words of para. 107(1)(a) amended, para. 107(1)(b) and the closing words of para. 107(1)(d) repealed, by 2001, c. 17, subsecs. 80(1) to (3), applicable to 2000 et seq. except that, in respect of transfers in 2000 or 2001, for the purposes of subsec. 107(1), as amended, the residence of a transferee trust shall be determined without reference to s. 94, as it read before 2002. Those portions formerly read:

(a) where the trust is a personal trust or a prescribed trust, for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's taxable capital gain, if any, from the disposition, the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the interest, or the part of the interest, as the case may be, immediately before the disposition shall be deemed to be the greater of

(b) for greater certainty, for the purposes of computing the taxpayer's allowable capital loss, if any, from the disposition of the interest or part thereof, as the case may be, the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the interest or part thereof immediately before the disposition is the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer thereof immediately before that time as determined under this Act without reference to paragraph (a), except that where the interest was an interest in an inter vivos trust not resident in Canada that was purchased by the taxpayer, paragraph (a) does not apply in respect of the disposition of all or any part thereof except where subsection (2) is applicable in respect of any distribution of property by the trust to the taxpayer in satisfaction of that interest or that part thereof, as the case may be.

Proposed Amendment — Application of S.C. 2001, c. 17, s. 80

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 1 — NRTs and FIEs), s. 46, will amend the application of the amendments made to subsec. 107(1) by S.C. 2001, c. 17, subsecs. 80(1) to (3) (see above), deemed in force on June 14, 2001, to read as follows:

The opening words of para. 107(1)(a) amended, para. 107(1)(b) and the closing words of para. 107(1)(d) repealed, by 2001, c. 17, subsecs. 80(1) to (3), applicable to 2000 et seq. except that, in respect of transfers after 1999 and before 2007, for the purposes of subsec. 107(1), as amended, the residence of a transferee trust shall be determined without reference to s. 94, in its application to taxation years that began before 2007.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 107(1)(a) applies for the purpose of computing a taxpayer's taxable capital gain from the disposition of a capital interest in a personal trust (or a prescribed trust described in section 4800.1 of the Income Tax Regulations), except where the interest was an interest in a non-resident inter vivos trust purchased by the taxpayer and the disposition was not by way of a distribution to which subsection 107(2) applies. For this purpose the residency of the trust is to be determined without reference to section 94 as it read before 2002.

This amendment to the Income Tax Amendments Act, 2000, ensures that, in applying subsection 107(1) in respect of transfers that occur after 1999 and before 2007, the residence of a transferee trust will be determined without reference to section 94, as it reads in its application to taxation years that began before 2007.

Para. 107(1)(c) amended, and para. (d) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 128(1), applicable to dispositions that occur after April 26, 1995 except that, for dispositions that occur before 1998, the first reference to “loss” in para. 107(1)(c) shall be read as “capital loss”. Para. 107(1)(c) formerly read:

(c) where the taxpayer is a corporation and the interest is not an interest in a prescribed trust, its capital loss from the disposition at any time of the interest or part thereof shall be deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the amount of its loss otherwise determined exceeds the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which was received by the trust before that time (and, where the trust is a unit trust, after 1987) and designated by it under subsection 104(19) or (20) in respect of the corporation

exceeds

(ii) such portion of the total referred to in subparagraph (i) as can reasonably be considered to have resulted in a reduction under this paragraph of its capital loss otherwise determined from the disposition before that time of an interest in the trust,

Para. 107(1)(a) amended by 1995, c. 21, s. 35, applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994. Para. (a) formerly read:

(a) where the trust is a personal trust or a prescribed trust, for the purposes of computing the taxpayer's taxable capital gain, if any, from the disposition of the interest or part thereof, as the case may be, the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer thereof immediately before the disposition shall be deemed to be an amount equal to the greater of the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer thereof otherwise determined immediately before that time and the cost amount to the taxpayer thereof immediately before that time,

Para. 107(1)(c) substituted by 1994, c. 21, s. 47, applicable to 1988 et seq. That para. formerly read:

(c) where the taxpayer is a corporation and the interest is not an interest in a prescribed trust, its capital loss from the disposition at any time of the interest or part thereof shall be deemed to be the amount of its loss otherwise determined minus the total of all amounts each of which is an amount received by the trust before that time and designated by it in respect of the corporation under subsection 104(19) or (20),

Para. 107(1)(a) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 76(1), to add "or a prescribed trust", applicable to dispositions occurring after 1987, other than a disposition of an interest in a trust, the units of which were listed on October 1, 1987 on a prescribed stock exchange, occurring before the earlier of

(a) January 1, 1991, and

(b) any date after October 1, 1987 on which a beneficial interest in the trust was or is issued.

Regulations: 4800.1 (prescribed trust).

Advance Tax Rulings: ATR-38: Distribution of all of the property of an estate.

(1.1) Cost of capital interest in a trust — The cost to a taxpayer of a capital interest of the taxpayer in a personal trust or a prescribed trust is deemed to be,

(a) where the taxpayer elected under subsection 110.6(19) in respect of the interest and the trust does not elect under that subsection in respect of any property of the trust, the taxpayer's cost of the interest determined under paragraph 110.6(19)(a); and

(b) in any other case, nil, unless

(i) any part of the interest was acquired by the taxpayer from a person who was the beneficiary in respect of the interest immediately before that acquisition, or

(ii) the cost of any part of the interest would otherwise be determined not to be nil under section 48 as it read in its application before 1993 or under paragraph 111(4)(e) or 128.1(1)(c) or (4)(c).

Related Provisions: 107.4(3)(k)-(m) — Cost of capital interest in trust following qualifying disposition; 107.4(4) — Fair market value of capital interest in trust; 248(25.4) — Addition to cost of capital interest in trust.

History: Subsec. 107(1.1) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 80(4), applicable to 2000 et seq. The subsec. formerly read:

(1.1) For the purpose of subsection (1) and notwithstanding paragraph 69(1)(c), the cost to a taxpayer of a capital interest in a trust, other than an interest acquired by the taxpayer from a person who was the beneficiary in respect of the interest immediately before its acquisition by the taxpayer or an interest issued to the taxpayer for consideration paid by the taxpayer that is equal to the fair market value of the interest at the time of issuance, is deemed to be

(a) where the taxpayer elects under subsection 110.6(19) in respect of the interest and the trust does not elect under that subsection in respect of any property of the trust, the taxpayer's cost of the interest determined under paragraph 110.6(19)(a); and

Subsec. 107(1.1) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 128(2), applicable to 1994 et seq. Subsec. 107(1.1) formerly read:

(1.1) For the purposes of subsection (1) and notwithstanding paragraph 69(1)(c), the cost to a taxpayer of a capital interest in a trust, other than an interest acquired by the taxpayer from a person who was the beneficiary in respect of the interest immediately before the acquisition thereof by the taxpayer or an interest issued to the taxpayer for consideration paid by the taxpayer that is equal to the fair market value thereof at the time of issuance, shall be deemed to be nil.

(1.2) Deemed fair market value — non-capital property — For the purpose of section 10, the fair market value at any time of a capital interest in a trust is deemed to be equal to the amount that is the total of

(a) the amount that would, if this Act were read without reference to this subsection, be its fair market value at that time, and

(b) the total of all amounts, each of which is an amount that would be described, in respect of the capital interest, in subparagraph 53(2)(h)(i.1) if that paragraph were read without reference to its subclause (B)(I), that has become payable to the taxpayer before that time.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 96(2), will add subsec. 107(1.2), applicable to dispositions that occur, and valuations made,

(a) after 2001 in respect of a qualified trust unit, as defined in subsec. 260(1), in respect of which an amount described in para. 260(5.1)(b), as amended, or that would have been so described had no election been made under subsec. 194(10) of former Bill C-10, is paid after 2001 and before February 28, 2004, except that para. 107(1.2)(b) shall, with respect to amounts described in subcl.

53(2)(h)(i.1)(B)(I) that were payable on or before 2002, be read without reference to the words "if that subparagraph were read without reference to its subclause (B)(I)"; and

(b) in any other case, after February 27, 2004, except that, subject to para. (a), para. 107(1.2)(b) shall, with respect to amounts described in subcl. 53(2)(h)(i.1)(B)(I) that were payable on or before February 27, 2004, be read without reference to the words "if that subparagraph were read without reference to its subclause (B)(I)".

Technical Notes: Where an interest in a trust is held as an inventory, the fair market value of the interest at valuation for the purpose of section 10 can be affected by non-taxable distributions from the trust, potentially producing a tax loss to the holder of the interest even though the holder had suffered no economic loss (thanks to the non-taxable distribution the holder has already received).

New subsection 107(1.2) requires that at any particular valuation time the fair market value of an interest in a trust be deemed to be the total of the fair market value otherwise determined and the sum of any returns of capital and non-taxable capital gains payable before that time.

The new subsection applies to valuations of trust interest that take place after February 27, 2004, and to valuations after 2001 if the trust interest in question is a qualified security, as defined in subsection 260(1), and an SLA compensation payment or a dealer compensation payment, as defined in subsection 260(1), has been paid in respect of the trust unit after 2001 and before February 27, 2004.

There is an exception to the application of the new subsection. Distributions of the non-taxable portion of capital gains will be added to the fair market value of an interest in a trust only if those distributions took place after the new subsection came into effect — that is, in the case of a trust interest that was the subject of a security lending arrangement (SLA) that was made between January 1, 2002 and February 27, 2004, after 2001, and, in all other cases, after February 27, 2004.

Related Provisions: 107.4(4) — Fair market value of vested capital interest in trust.

(2) Distribution by personal trust — Subject to subsections (2.001); (2.002) and (4) to (5), if at any time a property of a personal trust or a prescribed trust is distributed (otherwise than as a SIFT trust wind-up event) by the trust to a taxpayer who was a beneficiary under the trust and there is a resulting disposition of all or any part of the taxpayer's capital interest in the trust,

(a) the trust shall be deemed to have disposed of the property for proceeds of disposition equal to its cost amount to the trust immediately before that time;

(b) subject to subsection (2.2), the taxpayer is deemed to have acquired the property at a cost equal to the total of its cost amount to the trust immediately before that time and the specified percentage of the amount, if any, by which

(i) the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the capital interest or part of it, as the case may be, immediately before that time (determined without reference to paragraph (1)(a))

exceeds

(ii) the cost amount to the taxpayer of the capital interest or part of it, as the case may be, immediately before that time;

(b.1) for the purpose of paragraph (b), the specified percentage is,

(i) where the property is capital property (other than depreciable property), 100%,

(ii) where the property is eligible capital property in respect of a business of the trust, 100%, and

(iii) in any other case, 75%;

Proposed Amendment — 107(2)(b.1)(iii)

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 96(4), will amend subpara. 107(2)(b.1)(iii) to replace "75%" with "50%", applicable to distributions made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 107(2) applies where a personal trust or a prescribed trust described in section 4800.1 of the Regulations distributes property to a beneficiary and there is a resulting disposition of Part or all of the beneficiary's capital interest in the trust. Under paragraph 107(2)(a), the trust is deemed to have disposed of the property for proceeds of disposition equal to the property's cost amount. Under paragraph 107(2)(b), the property is deemed to have been acquired by the beneficiary for an amount equal to the total of the amount described in paragraph 107(2)(a) and a "bump" equal to the specified percentage of any excess of the adjusted cost base to the beneficiary of the capital interest over its cost amount (as defined by subsection 108(1)) to the beneficiary of the interest. Under subparagraph 107(2)(b.1)(iii), the specified percentage for property (other than non-depreciable capital property and eligible capital property) is 75%. Where subsection 107(2) applies, paragraph 107(2)(c) provides that the beneficiary is deemed to have disposed of all or part, as the case may be, of the capital interest for proceeds equal to the amount determined under that paragraph.

Subparagraph 107(2)(b.1)(iii) is amended to replace the reference to 75% with a reference to 50%, consistent with the current capital gains inclusion rate.

(c) the taxpayer is deemed to have disposed of all or part, as the case may be, of the capital interest for proceeds equal to the amount, if any, by which

(c) the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the capital interest in the trust (or of the part of it) disposed of by the taxpayer on the distribution are deemed to be equal to the amount, if any, by which

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 96(5), will amend the opening words of para. 107(2)(c) to read as above, applicable to distributions made after 1999.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 107(2)(c) is amended to clarify that it applies to determine a taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the capital interest in a trust (or of the part of it) disposed of by the taxpayer on a distribution, to which subsection 107(2) applies, of property by the trust.

(i) the cost at which the taxpayer would be deemed by paragraph (b) to have acquired the property if the specified percentage referred to in that paragraph were 100%

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is an eligible offset at that time of the taxpayer in respect of the capital interest or the part of it;

(d) where the property so distributed was depreciable property of a prescribed class of the trust and the amount that was the capital cost to the trust of that property exceeds the cost at which the taxpayer is deemed by this section to have acquired the property, for the purposes of sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a)

(i) the capital cost to the taxpayer of the property shall be deemed to be the amount that was the capital cost of the property to the trust, and

(ii) the excess shall be deemed to have been allowed to the taxpayer in respect of the property under regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing income for taxation years before the acquisition by the taxpayer of the property;

(d.1) [Repealed]

(e) [Repealed]

(f) where the property so distributed was eligible capital property of the trust in respect of a business of the trust,

(i) where the eligible capital expenditure of the trust in respect of the property exceeds the cost at which the taxpayer is deemed by this subsection to have acquired the property, for the purposes of sections 14, 20 and 24,

(A) the eligible capital expenditure of the taxpayer in respect of the property shall be deemed to be the amount that was the eligible capital expenditure of the trust in respect of the property, and

(B) $\frac{3}{4}$ of the excess shall be deemed to have been allowed under paragraph 20(1)(b) to the taxpayer in respect of the property in computing income for taxation years ending

(I) before the acquisition by the taxpayer of the property, and

(II) after the adjustment time of the taxpayer in respect of the business, and

(ii) for the purpose of determining after that time the amount required by paragraph 14(1)(b) to be included in computing the taxpayer's income in respect of any subsequent disposition of property of the business, there shall be added to the value otherwise determined for Q in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount, if any, determined for Q in that definition in respect of the business of the trust immediately before the distribution,

B is the fair market value of the property so distributed immediately before the distribution, and

C is the fair market value immediately before the distribution of all eligible capital property of the trust in respect of the business.

Proposed Amendment — 107(2.11)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 15, 2002:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letters of April 4, 2001 and October 19, 2001, concerning the application of the Income Tax Act (“the Act”) to a distribution of property by a mutual fund trust. I would also like to acknowledge your conversations with Mr. Grant Nash of this Division.

You have raised an issue concerning the possible taxation of income at the trust level where a trust, that has elected under subsection 107(2.11) in respect of the distribution of its property, makes a cash payment to unitholders out of the trust's income or capital gains. You submit that the effect of the election under subsection 107(2.11) extends to all of the trust's distributions, including cash payments to beneficiaries out of trust income or capital gains. If, as a result of subsection 107(2.11), the payments out of income or capital gains were ignored for the purposes of subsection 104(6) and (13), you submit that the corresponding amounts of income and capital gains would be recognized at the trust level. We confirm that such a result would be unintended.

The purpose of subsection 107(2.11) is to provide trusts with a mechanism of ensuring that capital gains, that arguably would otherwise be considered to be paid out to a unitholder upon a distribution of property from the trust to the unitholder, are not paid out on the distribution. Given this policy, the provision should generally apply only to distributions of property that would be expected to result in the realization at the trust level of such capital gains. Accordingly, the effect of an election under subsection 107(2.11) should not extend to distributions of cash denominated in Canadian dollars.

We are prepared to recommend amendments to subsection 107(2.11) of the Act to clarify its intended application in the circumstances described above. In addition, we are prepared to recommend that such an amendment apply to distributions of property made by a mutual fund trust after 2001, and, where the trust so elects, to distributions made by a mutual fund trust after 1999.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 107(4.1)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Oct. 19, 2007:

Ms. Kathy M. Munro, [xxx]

Dear Ms. Munro:

I am writing in connection with your letter, and subsequent discussions with officials of the Tax Policy Branch, concerning the application of subsection 107(4.1) of the Income Tax Act. In your view, subsection 107(4.1) is inappropriately broad in its effect on distributions from trusts, particularly where the trust was created before the provision's introduction.

You have provided an example of an inter vivos trust that was settled in 1986 through the gift of a gold coin with nominal value. Because the terms of the trust set out that decisions of the trust are to be determined by a majority that includes the settlor of the trust, subsection 75(2) of the Act may apply to attribute any income earned on the gold coin back to the settlor. As a result of the application of subsection 75(2) to the gold coin, subsection 107(4.1) will also apply to distributions of property from the trust. The effect of the application of subsection 107(4.1) will be to have subsection 107(2.1) of the Act apply to the distributions of property and thus prevent a rollover of the trust's properties to the beneficiaries (other than the settlor). Unlike subsection 75(2), which applies only in respect of the property contributed to the trust by the settlor, subsection 107(4.1) will apply not just to the gold coin, but to all of the properties of the trust that are distributed to beneficiaries. In your view, because the trust was established before 1989 (the year in which distributions were first subject to subsection 107(4.1)) it would be appropriate to allow some form of relief to the trust, particularly in respect of the property of the trust to which subsection 75(2) has never applied.

Having regard to your submission, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that subparagraph 107(4.1)(b)(ii) of the Act be amended so as not to apply in determining whether subsection 107(2.1) applies in respect of a trust distribution that occurs after 2001 and before 2009 where

- (a) the distribution is of property to which subsection 75(2) had not applied at any time while the property was held by any of the trusts referred to in subparagraph 107(4.1)(b)(ii),
- (b) one of the trusts referred to in subparagraph 107(4.1)(b)(ii),
 - was created before 1989, and
 - held, at a time before 1989, particular property that was, at that time, subject to subsection 75(2), and
- (c) none of the trusts referred to in subparagraph 107(4.1)(b)(ii) held any property (other than the particular property) that was subject to subsection 75(2).

While I cannot offer any assurance that Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, General Director — Legislation, Tax Policy Branch

Related Provisions: 248(5) — Substituted property.

History: Subsec. 107(4.1) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 80(17), applicable to distributions made after March 16, 2001. The subsec. formerly read:

(4.1) Where any property of a personal trust or a prescribed trust is distributed by the trust to a taxpayer who was a beneficiary under the trust in satisfaction of all or any part of the taxpayer's capital interest in the trust and

- (a) subsection 75(2) was applicable at any time in respect of any property of the trust,
- (b) the taxpayer was a person other than
 - (i) the person from whom the trust directly or indirectly received the property, or property for which the property was substituted, or
 - (ii) an individual in respect of whom subsection 73(1) would be applicable on the transfer of capital property from the person described in subparagraph (i), and
- (c) the person described in subparagraph (b)(i) was alive at the time the property was distributed, subsection (2.1) applies (and subsection (2) does not apply) in respect of the distribution.

The closing words of subsec. 107(4.1) amended by the said c. 17, subsec. 80(16), applicable to distributions made after 1999. The closing words formerly read:

notwithstanding paragraphs (2)(a) to (c), the rules described in paragraphs (4)(d) to (f) apply.

Regulations: 4800.1 (prescribed trust).

Proposed Addition — 107(4.2)

(4.2) Distribution of property received on qualifying disposition — Subsection (2.1) applies (and subsection (2) does not apply) at any time to property distributed after December 20, 2002 to a beneficiary by a personal trust or a trust prescribed for the purpose of subsection (2), if

- (a) at a particular time before December 21, 2002 there was a qualifying disposition (within the meaning assigned by subsection 107(4.1)) of the property, or of other property for which the property is substituted, by a particular partnership or a particular corporation, as the case may be, to a trust; and
- (b) the beneficiary is neither the particular partnership nor the particular corporation.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 96(24), will add subsec. 107(4.2), applicable to distributions made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: New subsection 107(4.2) prevents a tax-deferred distribution of property after December 20, 2002 from a personal trust or a trust prescribed for the purpose of subsection 107(2) to a beneficiary of the trust if specified conditions are met. The specified conditions are that:

- at a particular time before December 21, 2002 there was a qualifying disposition (within the meaning assigned by subsection 107(4.1)) of the property, or of other property for which the property is substituted, by a particular partnership or a particular corporation, as the case may be, to any trust; and
- the beneficiary is neither the particular partnership nor the particular corporation.

Where the specified conditions are met, subsection 107(2.1) will apply so that the trust is deemed to have disposed of the property for proceeds equal to the property's fair market value at the time of distribution.

Related Provisions: 248(5) — Substituted property.

(5) Distribution to non-resident — Subsection (2.1) applies (and subsection (2) does not apply) in respect of a distribution of a property (other than a share of the capital stock of a non-resident-owned investment corporation or property described in any of subparagraphs 128.1(4)(b)(i) to (iii)) by a trust resident in Canada to a non-resident taxpayer (including a partnership other than a Canadian partnership) in satisfaction of all or part of the taxpayer's capital interest in the trust.

Proposed Amendment — 107(5)

(5) Distribution to non-resident — Subsection (2.1) applies (and subsection (2) does not apply) in respect of a distribution of a property (other than a share of the capital stock of a non-resident-owned investment corporation or property described in any of subparagraphs 128.1(4)(b)(i) to (iii)) by a trust to a non-resident taxpayer (including a partnership other than a Canadian partnership) in satisfaction of all or part of the taxpayer's capital interest in the trust.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 96(24), will amend subsec. 107(5) to read as above, applicable to distributions made after February 27, 2004.

Technical Notes: Subsection 107(5) applies to the distribution of property (other than shares in non-resident-owned investment corporations or property described in any of subparagraphs 128.1(4)(b)(i) to (iii)) by a trust resident in Canada to a non-resident beneficiary (note that new paragraph 94(3)(a) does not apply in determining the residency of the beneficiary where it is a trust). In these circumstances, the rollover under subsection 107(2) is not available and instead subsection 107(2.1) will apply to determine the Canadian income tax consequences of the distribution to the trust and the beneficiary.

Subsection 107(5) is amended so that it applies whether the trust making the distribution is resident in Canada or not.

Related Provisions: 53(4) — Effect on ACB of share, partnership interest or trust interest; 94(4)(h) [proposed] — Deeming non-resident trust to be resident in Canada does not apply to 107(5); 107(2.11) — Election for gain not to be flowed out to beneficiary; 107(5.1) — Gain does not increase instalment requirements; 126(2.22) — Foreign tax credit to trust on disposition of property by non-resident beneficiary; 212(11) — Payment to non-resident beneficiary deemed paid as income of trust for withholding tax purposes; 220(4.6)–(4.63) — Security for tax on distribution of taxable Canadian property to non-resident beneficiary.

History: Subsec. 107(5) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 80(18), applicable to distributions made after October 1, 1996, except that for distributions made after October 1, 1996 and before 2000, subsec. 107(5) shall be read as follows:

(5) Where subsection (2) applies to a distribution at any time by a trust resident in Canada of a property (other than a share of the capital stock of a non-resident-owned investment corporation or property described in any of subparagraphs 128.1(4)(b)(i) to (iii)) to a non-resident taxpayer (including a partnership other than a Canadian partnership) who is a beneficiary under the trust in satisfaction of the taxpayer's capital interest in the trust, notwithstanding paragraphs (2)(a) to (c),

- (a) the trust is deemed to have disposed of the property for proceeds equal to its fair market value at that time;
- (b) the taxpayer is deemed to have acquired the property at a cost equal to that fair market value; and
- (c) the taxpayer is deemed to have disposed of all or part, as the case may be, of the taxpayer's capital interest in the trust, for proceeds of disposition equal to the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of that interest or part of the interest, as the case may be, immediately before that time.

Subsec. 107(5) formerly read:

(5) Where subsection (2) applies to the distribution by a trust of any property (other than a Canadian resource property, excluded property or property that would, if at no time in the taxation year of the trust in which it is so distributed the trust is resident in Canada, be taxable Canadian property) to a non-resident taxpayer (including a partnership other than a Canadian partnership) who is a beneficiary under the trust, notwithstanding paragraphs (2)(a) to (c),

(a) the trust shall be deemed to have disposed of the property for proceeds equal to its fair market value at that time;

(b) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have acquired the property at a cost equal to that fair market value; and

(c) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed of all or part, as the case may be, of the taxpayer's interest in the trust, for proceeds of disposition equal to the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the interest or part thereof, as the case may be, immediately before the property was so distributed.

That portion of subsec. 107(5) preceding para. (a) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 43(5), applicable to distributions occurring after 1991. That portion formerly read:

(5) Where subsection (2) is applicable in respect of the distribution by a trust of any property (other than a Canadian resource property or property that is or would, if at no time in the taxation year of the trust in which it was so distributed the trust had been resident in Canada, be taxable Canadian property) to a non-resident taxpayer (including a partnership other than a Canadian partnership) who was a beneficiary under the trust, notwithstanding paragraphs (2)(a) to (c), the following rules apply:

Advance Tax Rulings: ATR-70: Distribution of taxable Canadian property by a trust to a non-resident.

(5.1) Instalment interest — Where, solely because of the application of subsection (5), paragraphs (2)(a) to (c) do not apply to a distribution in a taxation year of taxable Canadian property by a trust, in applying sections 155, 156 and 156.1 and subsections 161(2), (4) and (4.01) and any regulations made for the purpose of those provisions, the trust's total taxes payable under this Part and Part I.1 for the year are deemed to be the lesser of

(a) the trust's total taxes payable under this Part and Part I.1 for the year, determined before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for the year, and

(b) the amount that would be determined under paragraph (a) if subsection (5) did not apply to each distribution in the year of taxable Canadian property to which the rules in subsection (2) do not apply solely because of the application of subsection (5).

History: Subsec. 107(5.1) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 80(18), applicable to distributions made after October 1, 1996.

(6) Loss reduction — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, where a person or partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "vendor") has disposed of property and would, but for this subsection, have had a loss from the disposition, the vendor's loss otherwise determined in respect of the disposition shall be reduced by such portion of that loss as may reasonably be considered to have accrued during a period in which

(a) the property or property for which it was substituted was owned by a trust; and

(b) neither the vendor nor a person that would, if section 251.1 were read without reference to the definition "controlled" in subsection 251.1(3), be affiliated with the vendor had a capital interest in the trust.

Related Provisions: 248(5) — Substituted property.

History: Para. 107(6)(b) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 128(6), applicable after April 26, 1995. Para. 107(6)(b) formerly read:

(b) neither

(i) the vendor, nor

(ii) any person related to the vendor, nor

(iii) any partnership of which the vendor or a person related to the vendor was a majority interest partner (within the meaning assigned by subsection 97(3.1))

107.1 Distribution by employee trust, employee benefit plan or similar trust — Where at any time any property of an employee trust, a trust governed by an employee benefit plan or a trust described in paragraph (a.1) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1) has been distributed by the trust to a taxpayer who was a beneficiary under the trust in satisfaction of all or any part of the taxpayer's interest in the trust, the following rules apply:

(a) in the case of an employee trust or a trust described in paragraph (a.1) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1),

Proposed Amendment — 107.1 before (a)(i)

107.1 Distribution by certain employment-related trusts — Where at any time any property of an employee life and health trust, an employee trust, a trust governed by an employee benefit plan or a trust described in paragraph (a.1) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1) has been distributed by the trust to a taxpayer who was a beneficiary under the trust in satisfaction of all or any part of the taxpayer's interest in the trust, the following rules apply:

(a) in the case of an employee life and health trust, an employee trust or a trust described in paragraph (a.1) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1),

Application: The February 26, 2010 draft legislation (ELHTs), s. 7, will amend the portion of s. 107.1 before subpara. (a)(i) to read as above, applicable after 2009.

Technical Notes: Section 107.1 provides rules to deal with a distribution to a taxpayer of property by an employee trust or a trust governed by an employee benefit plan under which the taxpayer is a beneficiary. Section 107.1 is amended to add a reference to an employee life and health trust (ELHT) in the preamble and in paragraph 107.1(a). As a result, in the unusual circumstance that property other than money is distributed by an ELHT, the ELHT will be treated as having disposed of the property at fair market value immediately before the distribution so that any gain may be recognized in the trust. The beneficiary is considered to acquire the property at fair market value.

(i) the trust shall be deemed to have disposed of the property immediately before that time for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value at that time, and

(ii) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have acquired the property at a cost equal to its fair market value at that time;

(b) in the case of a trust governed by an employee benefit plan,

(i) the trust shall be deemed to have disposed of the property for proceeds of disposition equal to its cost amount to the trust immediately before that time, and

(ii) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have acquired the property at a cost equal to the greater of

(A) its fair market value at that time, and

(B) the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the taxpayer's interest or part thereof, as the case may be, immediately before that time;

(c) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed of the taxpayer's interest or part thereof, as the case may be, for proceeds of disposition equal to the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of that interest or part thereof immediately before that time; and

(d) where the property was depreciable property of a prescribed class of the trust and the amount that was the capital cost to the trust of that property exceeds the cost at which the taxpayer is deemed by this section to have acquired the property, for the purposes of sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a),

(i) the capital cost to the taxpayer of the property shall be deemed to be the amount that was the capital cost of the property to the trust, and

(ii) the excess shall be deemed to have been allowed to the taxpayer in respect of the property under regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing income for taxation years before the acquisition by the taxpayer of the property.

History: The portion of s. 107.1 before subpara. (a)(i) amended by 2001, c. 17, s. 81, applicable to 1999 et seq. The portion formerly read:

107.1 Distribution by employee trust or employee benefit plan — Where at any time any property of an employee trust or a trust governed by an employee benefit plan has been distributed by the trust to a taxpayer who was a beneficiary under the trust in satisfaction of all or any part of the taxpayer's interest in the trust, the following rules apply:

(a) in the case of an employee trust,

(a) the trust shall be deemed to have disposed of the property for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value at that time;

(b) the trust shall be deemed to have paid to the taxpayer as a distribution an amount equal to that fair market value;

(c) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have acquired the property at a cost equal to that fair market value;

(d) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed of the taxpayer's interest or part thereof, as the case may be, for proceeds of disposition equal to the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of that interest or part thereof immediately before that time; and

(i) the capital cost to the taxpayer of the property shall be deemed to be the amount that was the capital cost of the property to the trust, and

(ii) the excess shall be deemed to have been allowed to the taxpayer in respect of the property under regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing the taxpayer's income for taxation years before the acquisition by the taxpayer of the property.

(a) subject to paragraph (b), the taxpayer's income, non-capital loss and net capital loss for the particular year shall be computed as if the amount of the income or loss of the trust for the trust's year from any source or from sources in a particular place were the income or loss of the taxpayer from that source or from sources in that particular place for the particular year, to the extent of the portion thereof that can reasonably be considered to be the taxpayer's share of such income or loss; and

(b) if the taxpayer is non-resident at any time in the particular year and an income or loss described in paragraph (a) or an amount to which paragraph 12(1)(z.1) or (z.2) applies would not otherwise be included in computing the taxpayer's taxable income or taxable income earned in Canada, as the case may be, notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the income, the loss or the amount shall be attributed to the carrying on of business in Canada by the taxpayer through a fixed place of business located in the province in which the site to which the trust relates is situated.

Proposed Amendment — 107.4(1) opening words

107.4 (1) Qualifying disposition — In this section, a "qualifying disposition" of a property means a disposition of the property before December 21, 2002 by a person or partnership, and a disposition of property after December 20, 2002 by an individual, (which person, partnership or individual is referred to in this subsection as the "contributor") as a result of a transfer of the property to a particular trust where

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 99(1), will amend the opening words of subsec. 107.4(1) to read as above, deemed to have come into force on December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 107.4(3) generally provides for a rollover of property to a trust where the property is transferred to the trust by way of a qualifying disposition. For this purpose, subsection 107.4(1) defines "qualifying disposition" to be a disposition of property to a trust that does not result in any change in the beneficial ownership of the property and that otherwise meets the conditions set out in that subsection. A partnership, corporation or individual (including a trust) are all qualified transferors for the purpose of applying the definition "qualifying disposition" in subsection 107.4(1). Where the transferee trust is a non-resident trust, a qualifying disposition will occur only where the conditions in paragraph 107.4(1)(c) are satisfied. Another condition that must be met for there to be a qualifying disposition is found in paragraph 107.4(1)(d), which requires that the disposition not be by a partnership, if the disposition is part of a series of transactions or events that begins after December 17, 1999 and includes the cessation of the partnership's existence and a subsequent distribution from a personal trust to a former member of the partnership in circumstances to which subsection 107(2) applies.

Subsection 107.4(1) is amended so that after December 20, 2002 only an individual (including a trust) may make a qualifying disposition to a trust. As a result, paragraph 107.4(1)(d) is repealed.

For a related amendment, see the commentary to new subsection 107(4.2).

(a) the disposition does not result in a change in the beneficial ownership of the property;

(b) the proceeds of disposition would, if this Act were read without reference to this section and sections 69 and 73, not be determined under any provision of this Act;

(c) if the particular trust is non-resident, the disposition is not

(i) by a person resident in Canada or by a partnership (other than a partnership each member of which is non-resident), or

(ii) a transfer of taxable Canadian property from a non-resident person who was resident in Canada in any of the ten calendar years preceding the transfer;

Proposed Amendment — 107.4(1)(c)

(c) the particular trust is resident in Canada at the time of the transfer;

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 99(2), will amend para. 107.4(1)(c) to read as above, applicable to dispositions that occur after February 27, 2004.

Technical Notes: In addition, paragraph 107.4(1)(c) is amended so that a qualifying disposition can only be made where the transferee trust is resident in Canada at the time of the transfer. This amendment applies to dispositions that occur after February 27, 2004. For this purpose, the residency of a trust is determined without regard to new paragraph 94(3)(a). For more detail, see the commentary to new paragraph 94(4)(b).

(d) the contributor is not a partnership, if the disposition is part of a series of transactions or events that begin after December 17, 1999 that includes the cessation of the partnership's existence and a subsequent distribution from a personal trust to a former member of the partnership in circumstances to which subsection 107(2) applies;

Proposed Repeal — 107.4(1)(d)

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 99(3), will repeal para. 107.4(1)(d), deemed to have come into force on December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: See under 107.4(1) opening words above.

(e) unless the contributor is a trust, there is immediately after the disposition no absolute or contingent right of a person or partnership (other than the contributor or, where the property was co-owned, each of the joint contributors) as a beneficiary (determined with reference to subsection 104(1.1)) under the particular trust;

(f) the contributor is not an individual (other than a trust described in any of paragraphs (a) to (e.1) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1)), if the particular trust is described in any of paragraphs (a) to (e.1) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1);

(g) the disposition is not part of a series of transactions or events

(i) that begins after December 17, 1999 and that includes the subsequent acquisition, for consideration given to a personal trust, of a capital interest or an income interest in the trust,

(ii) that begins after December 17, 1999 and that includes the disposition of all or part of a capital interest or an income interest in a personal trust, other than a disposition solely as a consequence of a distribution from a trust to a person or partnership in satisfaction of all or part of that interest, or

(iii) that begins after June 5, 2000 and that includes the transfer to the particular trust of particular property as consideration for the acquisition of a capital interest in the particular trust, if the particular property can reasonably be considered to have been received by the particular trust in order to fund a distribution (other than a distribution that is proceeds of disposition of a capital interest in the particular trust);

(h) the disposition is not, and is not part of, a transaction

(i) that occurs after December 17, 1999, and

(ii) that includes the giving to the contributor, for the disposition, of any consideration (other than consideration that is an interest of the contributor as a beneficiary under the particular trust or that is the assumption by the particular trust of debt for which the property can, at the time of the disposition, reasonably be considered to be security);

(i) subsection 73(1) does not apply to the disposition and would not apply to the disposition if

(i) no election had been made under that subsection, and

(ii) section 73 were read without reference to subsection 73(1.02); and

(j) if the contributor is an amateur athlete trust, a cemetery care trust, an employee trust, an inter vivos trust deemed by subsection 143(1) to exist in respect of a congregation that is a constituent part of a religious organization, a related segregated fund trust (as defined by section 138.1), a trust described in paragraph 149(1)(o.4) or a trust governed by an eligible funeral arrangement, an employees profit sharing plan, a registered disability savings plan, a registered education savings plan, a registered supplementary unemployment benefit plan or a TFSA, the particular trust is the same type of trust; and

Proposed Amendment — 107.4(1)(j)

(j) if the contributor is an amateur athlete trust, a cemetery care trust, an employee life and health trust, an employee trust, an inter vivos trust deemed by subsection 143(1) to exist in respect of a congregation that is a constituent part of a religious organization, a related segregated fund trust (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 138.1(1)(a)), a trust described in paragraph 149(1)(o.4) or a trust governed by an eligible funeral arrangement, an employees profit sharing plan, a registered disability savings plan, a registered education savings plan, a registered supplementary unemployment benefit plan or a TFSA, the particular trust is the same type of trust.

Application: The February 26, 2010 draft legislation (ELHTs); s. 8, will amend para. 107.4(1)(j) to read as above, applicable after 2009.

Technical Notes: Under subsection 107.4(3), a qualifying disposition of property to a trust generally qualifies for a tax-deferred rollover. For this purpose, subsection 107.4(1) defines “qualifying disposition” to be a disposition of property to a trust that does not result in any change in the beneficial ownership of the property and that otherwise meets the conditions set out in that subsection. Paragraph 107.4(1)(j), which applies where the transferor is a trust governed by a registered education savings plan (RESP) or certain other special purpose trusts, requires the transferor trust to be the same type of trust as the transferee trust. For example, if the transferor trust is an RESP trust, the transferee trust must also be an RESP trust for the disposition to be a qualifying disposition.

Paragraph 107.4(1)(j) is amended so that it also applies to transfers between ELHTs.

(a) to dispositions that occur after December 23, 1998; and

(b) in respect of 1993 et seq., to transfers of capital property that occurred before December 24, 1998, except that, in its application to transfers before December 24, 1998, subsec. 107.4(1) shall be read as follows:

107.4 (1) For the purpose of this section, a “qualifying disposition” of a property means a transfer of the property to a particular trust that was not a disposition of the property for the purpose of subdivision c because of paragraph (e) of the definition “disposition” in section 54, except where

(a) if the transfer is from another trust to the particular trust,

(i) each trust can reasonably be considered to act as agent for the same beneficiary or beneficiaries in respect of the property transferred, or

(ii) the transferee trust can reasonably be considered to act as agent for the transferor trust in respect of the property transferred; and

(b) in any other case, it is reasonable to consider that the particular trust acts as agent in respect of the property transferred.

(2) Application of paragraph (1)(a) — For the purpose of paragraph (1)(a),

(a) except where paragraph (b) applies, where a trust (in this paragraph and subsection (2.1) referred to as the “transferor trust”), in a period that does not exceed one day, disposes of one or more properties in the period to one or more other trusts, there is deemed to be no resulting change in the beneficial ownership of those properties if

(i) the transferor trust receives no consideration for the disposition, and

(ii) as a consequence of the disposition, the value of each beneficiary’s beneficial ownership at the beginning of the period under the transferor trust in each particular property of the transferor trust (or group of two or more properties of the transferor trust that are identical to each other) is the same as the value of the beneficiary’s beneficial ownership at the end of the period under the transferor trust and the other trust or trusts in each particular property (or in property that was immediately before the disposition included in the group of identical properties referred to above); and a person or partnership (in this subsection referred to as the “transferor”) to a trust (in this subsection referred to as the “transferee trust”),

(a) the transferor’s proceeds of disposition of the property are deemed to be

(i) where the transferor so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister on or before the transferor’s filing-due date for its taxation year that includes the particular time, or at any later time that is acceptable to the Minister, the amount specified in the election that is not less than the cost amount to the transferor of the property immediately before the particular time and not more than the fair market value of the property at the particular time, and

(ii) in any other case, the cost amount to the transferor of the property immediately before the particular time;

(c) [Repealed]

(d) if the property was depreciable property of a prescribed class of the transferor and its capital cost to the transferor exceeds the cost at which the transferee trust is deemed by this subsection to have acquired the property, for the purposes of sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made for the purpose of paragraph 20(1)(a),

(i) the capital cost of the property to the transferee trust is deemed to be the amount that was the capital cost of the property to the transferor, and

(ii) the excess is deemed to have been allowed to the transferee trust in respect of the property under regulations made for the purpose of paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing income for taxation years that ended before the particular time;

(e) if the property was eligible capital property of the transferor in respect of a business of the transferor,

(i) where the eligible capital expenditure of the transferor in respect of the property exceeds the cost at which the transferee trust is deemed by this subsection to have acquired the property, for the purposes of sections 14, 20 and 24,

(A) the eligible capital expenditure of the transferee trust in respect of the property is deemed to be the amount that was the eligible capital expenditure of the transferor in respect of the property, and

A is the amount, if any, determined for Q in that definition in respect of the business of the transferor immediately before the particular time,

B is the fair market value of the property immediately before the particular time, and

(g) where the transferor is a related segregated fund trust (in this paragraph having the meaning assigned by section 138.1),

(i) paragraph 138.1(1)(i) does not apply in respect of a disposition of an interest in the transferor that occurs in connection with the qualifying disposition, and

(ii) in computing the amount determined under paragraph 138.1(1)(i) in respect of a subsequent disposition of an interest in the transferee trust where the interest is deemed to exist in connection with a particular life insurance policy, the acquisition fee (as defined by subsection 138.1(6)) in respect of the particular policy shall be determined as if each amount determined under any of paragraphs 138.1(6)(a) to (d) in respect of the policyholder’s interest in the transferor had been determined in respect of the policyholder’s interest in the transferee trust;

(h) if the transferor is a trust to which property had been transferred by an individual (other than a trust),

(i) where subsection 73(1) applied in respect of the property so transferred and it is reasonable to consider that the property was so transferred in anticipation of the individual ceasing to be resident in Canada, for the purposes of paragraph 104(4)(a.3) and the application of this paragraph to a disposition by the transferee trust after the particular time, the transferee trust is deemed after the particular time to be a trust to which the individual had transferred property in anticipation of the individual ceasing to reside in Canada and in circumstances to which subsection 73(1) applied, and

(ii) for the purposes of paragraph (j) of the definition “excluded right or interest” in subsection 128.1(10) and the application of this paragraph to a disposition by the transferee trust after the particular time, where the property so transferred was transferred in circumstances to which this subsection would apply if subsection (1) were read without reference to paragraphs (1)(h) and (i), the transferee trust is deemed after the particular time to be a trust an interest in which was acquired by the individual as a consequence of a qualifying disposition;

(i) if the transferor is a trust (other than a personal trust or a trust prescribed for the purposes of subsection 107(2)), the transferee trust is deemed to be neither a personal trust nor a trust prescribed for the purposes of subsection 107(2);

(j) if the transferor is a trust and a taxpayer disposes of all or part of a capital interest in the transferor because of the qualifying disposition and, as a consequence, acquires a capital interest or part of it in the transferee trust

(i) the taxpayer is deemed to dispose of the capital interest or part of it in the transferor for proceeds equal to the cost amount to the taxpayer of that interest or part of it immediately before the particular time, and

(ii) the taxpayer is deemed to acquire the capital interest or part of it in the transferee trust at a cost equal to the amount, if any, by which

(A) that cost amount exceeds

(B) the amount by which the taxpayer's loss otherwise determined from the disposition referred to in subparagraph (i) would be reduced because of paragraph 107(1)(c) or (d) if the proceeds under that subparagraph were equal to the fair market value of the capital interest or part of it in the transferor immediately before the particular time;

(k) where the transferor is a trust, a taxpayer's beneficial ownership in the property ceases to be derived from the taxpayer's capital interest in the transferor because of the qualifying disposition and no part of the taxpayer's capital interest in the transferor was disposed of because of the qualifying disposition, there shall, immediately after the particular time, be added to the cost otherwise determined of the taxpayer's capital interest in the transferee trust, the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the cost amount to the taxpayer of the taxpayer's capital interest in the transferor immediately before the particular time,

B is the fair market value immediately before the particular time of the taxpayer's capital interest in the transferor,

C is the fair market value at the particular time of the taxpayer's capital interest in the transferor (determined as if the only property disposed of at the particular time were the particular property), and

D is the lesser of

(i) the amount, if any, by which the cost amount to the taxpayer of the taxpayer's capital interest in the transferor immediately before the particular time exceeds the fair market value of the taxpayer's capital interest in the transferor immediately before the particular time, and

(ii) the maximum amount by which the taxpayer's loss from a disposition of a capital interest otherwise determined could have been reduced because of paragraph 107(1)(c) or (d) if the taxpayer's capital interest in the transferor had been disposed of immediately before the particular time;

(l) where paragraph (k) applies to the qualifying disposition in respect of a taxpayer, the amount that would be determined under that paragraph in respect of the qualifying disposition if the amount determined for D in that paragraph were nil shall, immediately after the particular time, be deducted in computing the cost otherwise determined of the taxpayer's capital interest in the transferor;

(m) where paragraphs (j) and (k) do not apply in respect of the qualifying disposition, the transferor is deemed to acquire the capital interest or part of it in the transferee trust that is acquired as a consequence of the qualifying disposition

(i) where the transferee trust is a personal trust, at a cost equal to nil, and

(ii) in any other case, at a cost equal to the excess determined under paragraph (b) in respect of the qualifying disposition; and

(n) if the transferor is a trust and a taxpayer disposes of all or part of an income interest in the transferor because of the qualifying disposition and, as a consequence, acquires an income interest or a part of an income interest in the transferee trust, for the purpose of subsection 106(2), the taxpayer is deemed not to dispose of any part of the income interest in the transferor at the particular time.

Proposed Amendment — 108(1) "testamentary trust" opening words

"testamentary trust", in a taxation year, means a trust that arose on and as a consequence of the death of an individual (including a trust referred to in subsection 248(9.1)), other than

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 100(1), will amend the opening words of the definition "testamentary trust" in subsec. 108(1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 108(1) defines "testamentary trust" generally as a trust or estate that arose on and in consequence of the death of an individual, and provides some exceptions to that definition.

Subsection 104(1) provides that references to a "trust" in subdivision k of the Act (i.e., sections 104 to 108) of Division B of Part I of the Act include a trust or estate. The definition "testamentary trust" in subsection 108(1) is therefore amended to remove the reference to "estate" because the references in that definition to a "trust" include an estate.

- (a) a trust created by a person other than the individual,
- (b) a trust created after November 12, 1981 if, before the end of the taxation year, property has been contributed to the trust otherwise than by an individual on or after the individual's death and as a consequence thereof, and
- (c) a trust created before November 13, 1981 if
 - (i) after June 28, 1982 property has been contributed to the trust otherwise than by an individual on or after the individual's death and as a consequence thereof, or
 - (ii) before the end of the taxation year, the total fair market value of the property owned by the trust that was contributed to the trust otherwise than by an individual on or after the individual's death and as a consequence thereof and the property owned by the trust that was substituted for such property exceeds the total fair market value of the property owned by the trust that was contributed by an individual on or after the individual's death and as a consequence thereof and the property owned by the trust that was substituted for such property, and for the purposes of this paragraph the fair market value of any property shall be determined as at the time it was acquired by the trust; and

(d) a trust that, at any time after December 20, 2002 and before the end of the taxation year, incurs a debt or any other obligation owed to, or guaranteed by, a beneficiary or any other person or partnership (which beneficiary, person or partnership is referred to in this paragraph as the "specified party") with whom any beneficiary of the trust does not deal at arm's length, other than a debt or other obligation

(i) incurred by the trust in satisfaction of the specified party's right as a beneficiary under the trust

(A) to enforce payment of an amount of the trust's income or capital gains payable at or before that time by the trust to the specified party, or

(B) to otherwise receive any part of the capital of the trust,

(ii) owed to the specified party, if the debt or other obligation arose because of a service (for greater certainty, not including any transfer or loan of property) rendered by the specified party to, for or on behalf of the trust, or

(iii) owed to the specified party, if

(A) the debt or other obligation arose because of a payment made by the specified party for or on behalf of the trust,

(B) in exchange for the payment, the trust transfers property, the fair market value of which is not less than the principal amount of that debt or other obligation, to the specified party within 12 months after the payment was made (or, where written application has been made to the Minister by the trust within that 12 months, within any longer period that the Minister considers reasonable in the circumstances), and

(C) it is reasonable to conclude that the specified party would have been willing to make the payment if the specified party dealt at arm's length with the trust, except where the trust is the individual's estate and that payment was made within the first 12 months after the individual's death (or, where written application has been made to the Minister by the estate within that 12 months, within any longer period that the Minister considers reasonable in the circumstances);

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 100(2), will add para. (d) to the definition "testamentary trust" in subsec. 108(1), applicable to taxation years that end after December 20, 2002, except that

(a) a transfer that is required, by cl. (d)(iii)(B) of the definition, as amended, to be made within 12 months after a payment was made is deemed to be made in a timely manner if it is made within 12 months after former Bill C-10 is assented to; and

(b) for those taxation years that end before the day on which former Bill C-10 is assented to, the reference to "the individual's death" in cl. (d)(iii)(C) of the definition, as amended, shall be read as a reference to "after the individual's death and no later than 12 months after the day on which the Income Tax Amendments Act, 2006 [former Bill C-10] is assented to";

Technical Notes: New paragraph (d) of the definition "testamentary trust" is an anti-avoidance rule. That new paragraph provides that a testamentary trust in a taxation year does not include a trust (in the commentary on this amendment, references to "trust" include an estate) that incurs, after December 20, 2002 and before the end of the taxation year, a debt or any other obligation to pay an amount to, or guaranteed by, a beneficiary or any other person or partnership (referred to in this commentary as the "specified party") with whom any beneficiary of the trust does not deal at arm's length. However, such a debt will not affect the status of the trust as a testamentary trust if it is a debt or other obligation owed to the specified party and

- it is incurred by the trust in satisfaction of the specified party's right as a beneficiary under the trust to enforce payment of an amount of income or capital gains payable by the trust to the specified party or to otherwise receive any part of the capital of the trust,

- it arose because of a service (for greater certainty, not including any transfer or loan of property) rendered by the specified party to, for or on behalf of the trust; for example, this would include debts or other obligations arising in respect of services rendered in a person's capacity as an executor or administrator of an estate, as a liquidator of succession or as a trustee of a trust, or

- it arose because of a payment made by the specified party for or on behalf of (but not to) the trust; for example, a payment of funeral expenses on behalf of the deceased's estate. However, to qualify under this provision, additional conditions must be satisfied. In very general terms, these conditions are that the trust fully reimburse the specified party within a year of the specified party making the payment. More precisely, in exchange for the payment the trust must transfer property (the fair market value of which is not less than the principal amount of that debt or other obligation that arose because of the payment) to the specified party within 12 months after the specified party made the payment (or, where written application has been made to the Minister by the trust within that 12 months, within any longer period that the Minister considers reasonable in the circumstances). A transfer of property, within the required period by the trust to the specified party, which does not result in the settlement or cancellation of that debt or obligation would not satisfy this requirement. It must also be reasonable to conclude that the specified party would have been willing to make the payment if the specified party dealt at arm's length with the trust. This third requirement is suspended, however, where the trust is an individual's estate and the payment giving rise to the debt or obligation was made within the first 12 months after the individual's death (or, where written application has been made to the Minister of National Revenue by the estate within that 12 months, within any longer period that the Minister considers reasonable in the circumstances).

These amendments apply to trust taxation years that end after December 20, 2002. However, a transfer that is required, by clause (d)(iii)(B) of the definition "testamentary trust" in subsection 108(1) to be made within 12 months after a payment was made, is deemed to have been made in a timely manner if it is made no later than 12 months after this amended definition receives Royal Assent. In effect, the deadline imposed by that clause for the full reimbursement of the specified party by the trust or estate is extended, without need for written application, provided that the full reimbursement is made within 12 months after Royal Assent.

In addition, for taxation years that end before Royal Assent, the exception from the arm's length condition for obligations owed by an estate (which condition and exception are set out in clause (d)(iii)(C) of the definition) will apply so that a payment that is made by a specified party for or on behalf of the estate and that is described in clause (d)(iii)(A) will not be subject to the arm's length requirement where the payment is made at any time after the individual's death and not later than 12 months after Royal Assent. For these taxation years, if such a qualifying payment is not made within 12 months after Royal Assent, then the Minister may grant a further extension of the period, beyond 12 months after Royal Assent, if written application is made to the Minister by the estate within 12 months after Royal Assent.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, April 26, 2004:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of March 3, 2004, concerning proposed paragraph (d) of the definition "testamentary trust" in subsection 108(1) of the Income Tax Act, contained in the Legislative Proposals and Draft Regulations relating to Income Tax ("Legislative Proposals"), released by the Minister of Finance on February 27, 2004.

Subsection 108(1) of the Act defines "testamentary trust" generally as a trust that arose on and as a consequence of the death of an individual, and provides some exceptions to that definition. A reference in that definition to a trust includes an estate.

Proposed paragraph (d) of the definition "testamentary trust" is an anti-avoidance rule that is intended to respond to the use of testamentary trusts as vehicles for income splitting. That new paragraph provides that a testamentary trust in a taxation year does not include a trust or estate that incurs, after December 20, 2002 and before the end of the taxation year, a debt or any other obligation to pay an amount to, or guaranteed by, a beneficiary or any other person or partnership (referred to in the proposed definition as the "specified party") with whom any beneficiary of the trust or estate does not deal at arm's length.

Certain of such debts and obligations would, however, not cause a trust or estate to lose its status as a testamentary trust. For example, under proposed subparagraph (d)(iii) of the definition, a debt or obligation would not affect the status of a trust or estate as a testamentary trust if it is a debt or other obligation owed to the specified party, it arose because of a payment made by the specified party for or on behalf of the trust or estate, the trust or estate fully reimburses the specified party within a year of the specified party making the payment and it is reasonable to conclude that the specified party would have been willing to make the payment if the specified party dealt at arm's length with the trust or estate.

In your letter you have expressed concern that the last condition in subparagraph (d)(iii) of that definition — that the specified party would have been willing to make the payment if the specified party dealt at arm's length with the trust or estate — will, in practice, not be satisfied in the case of the vast majority of estates of deceased individuals. We understand from your letter that this is because of the legal limitations placed on the estate executor's ability to deal with property of the estate, such that family members of a deceased individual will often undertake to make payments on behalf of the estate — for example, the payment of funeral expenses or a tax liability — without any expectation, or arrangement to the effect, that the reimbursement by the estate of such payments include an arm's length amount of interest. As a result, under that proposed paragraph of the definition "testamentary trust" the estate would lose its status under the Act as a testamentary trust.

We are of the view that the loss of an estate's status as a testamentary trust, in these circumstances, would be inconsistent with the policy objectives of proposed paragraph (d) of the definition. Therefore, we are prepared to recommend a modification to proposed subparagraph (d)(iii) of the definition "testamentary trust", to provide that the requirement in clause (C) of that subparagraph — that the specified party would have been willing to make the payment if the specified party dealt at arm's length with an individual's estate — not apply where the payment for or on behalf of an estate is made within the first 12 months after the individual's death (or, where written application has been made to the Minister of National Revenue by the estate within that 12 months, within any longer period that that Minister considers reasonable in the circumstances). As a result, where the remaining conditions of proposed subparagraph (d)(iii) of that definition are satisfied, to the extent that the circumstances do not involve an attempt to use the estate as a vehicle for income splitting, the anti-avoidance provisions of the Act would not be expected to apply to cause the estate to lose its status as a testamentary trust.

For these purposes, we will also recommend that an application, otherwise required to be filed before 120 days after the amending legislation containing that proposed subparagraph (d)(iii) receives Royal Assent, be deemed to have been filed on a timely basis if it is filed in writing with the Minister of National Revenue within 120 days after that Royal Assent.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 108(1) "trust" (a)

Application: The February 26, 2010 draft legislation (ELHTs), s. 9, will amend para. (a) of the definition "trust" in subsec. 108(1) to add "an employee life and health trust," after "an amateur athlete trust," applicable after 2009.

Technical Notes: Section 108 sets out certain definitions and rules that apply for the purposes of subdivision k, which deals with the taxation of trusts and their beneficiaries.

For the purposes of the 21-year deemed disposition rule and other specified measures, subsection 108(1) defines "trust" to exclude certain trusts. Under paragraph (a), trusts governed by RRSPs and a number of other special income plans are among the excluded trusts for these purposes.

Paragraph (a) is amended to add to the list of exclusions an employee life and health trust. For more information regarding employee life and health trusts, please refer to the commentary on new section 144.1.

Proposed Amendment — 108(1) “trust” between (e.1) and (f)

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 100(3), will delete “and section 106” from the portion of the definition “trust” in subsec. 108(1) between paras. (e.1) and (f), applicable to 1998 et seq.

Technical Notes: For the purposes of the 21-year deemed disposition rule and other specified measures, subsection 108(1) defines “trust” to exclude certain listed trusts. For these purposes, paragraph (f) of the definition excludes unit trusts (as defined in subsection 108(2)) and paragraph (g) excludes, except as specified, trusts all interests in which have vested indefeasibly.

This definition is amended so that section 106 is not a provision for the purposes of which paragraphs (f) and (g) of the definition apply. Section 106 provides rules in respect of an “income interest” (as defined in subsection 108(1)) in a “personal trust” (as defined in subsection 248(1)). As a result of this amendment, for the purpose of section 106, references to a trust will include a trust described in paragraph (g) of the definition “trust” in subsection 108(1). (As the definition “personal trust” expressly excludes a unit trust, paragraph (f) of the definition “trust” in subsection 108(1) is not relevant for this purpose.)

(f) a trust that, at that time, is a unit trust, or

(g) a trust all interests in which, at that time, have vested indefeasibly, other than

(i) an alter ego trust, a joint spousal or common-law partner trust, a post-1971 spousal or common-law partner trust or a trust to which paragraph 104(4)(a.4) applies,

(ii) a trust that has elected under subsection 104(5.3),

(iii) a trust that has, in its return of income under this Part for its first taxation year that ends after 1992, elected that this paragraph not apply,

(iv) a trust that is at that time resident in Canada where the total fair market value at that time of all interests in the trust held at that time by beneficiaries under the trust who at that time are non-resident is more than 20% of the total fair market value at that time of all interests in the trust held at that time by beneficiaries under the trust,

(v) a trust under the terms of which, at that time, all or part of a person's interest in the trust is to be terminated with reference to a period of time (including a period of time determined with reference to the person's death), otherwise than as a consequence of terms of the trust under which an interest in the trust is to be terminated as a consequence of a distribution to the person (or the person's estate) of property of the trust if the fair market value of the property to be distributed is required to be commensurate with the fair market value of that interest immediately before the distribution, or

(vi) a trust that, before that time and after December 17, 1999, has made a distribution to a beneficiary in respect of the beneficiary's capital interest in the trust, if the distribution can reasonably be considered to have been financed by a liability of the trust and one of the purposes of incurring the liability was to avoid taxes otherwise payable under this Part as a consequence of the death of any individual;

Proposed Amendment — 108(2)(b)(iv)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 7, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of October 17, 2002, concerning the interaction of paragraph 108(2)(b) and subsection 39(2) of the Income Tax Act.

As you know, if the issued units of a trust do not meet the conditions of paragraph 108(2)(a) of the Act, the trust must at that time meet the requirements of paragraph 108(2)(b) or (c) in order to qualify at any time as a “unit trust” under the Act. For a trust that relies upon paragraph 108(2)(b), subparagraph 108(2)(b)(iii) imposes upon the trust the condition that at least 80% of the trust’s property consist of any combination of property described in clauses 108(2)(b)(iii)(A) to (G). Subparagraph 108(2)(b)(iv) requires, in general terms, that at least 95% of the trust’s income over certain periods of time be derived from investments, or dispositions of investments, in property described in subparagraph (iii).

Subsection 39(2) of the Act deems certain gains resulting from the fluctuation in value of foreign currency to be capital gains from the disposition of foreign currency.

In your letter, you describe a trust that seeks to rely on paragraph 108(2)(b) to qualify as a unit trust. Some of the trust’s property may consist of foreign investments. The trust may seek to minimize its risk of foreign currency fluctuations by funding its foreign investments with debt denominated in the foreign currency in which those foreign investments are denominated. We assume that the trust carries on, at all relevant times, these activities in a manner that permits it to satisfy the limitations, in subparagraph 108(2)(b)(ii), on its undertaking.

You are concerned that the portion, if any, of the trust’s income in a given year that arises from the application of subsection 39(2) would not be income derived from investments, or the disposition of investments, described in subparagraph 108(2)(b)(iii), such that the trust might not be able to satisfy the conditions of subparagraph 108(2)(b)(iv). As a result, you are seeking an amendment to subparagraph 108(2)(b)(iv) so that the trust’s income would be computed without regard to subsection 39(2).

In our view, the deemed capital gains that arise because of the application of subsection 39(2) should not be included in computing the income of a trust for the purpose of subparagraph 108(2)(b)(iv). We are, therefore, prepared to recommend a clarifying amendment to the Act so that, in applying subparagraph 108(2)(b)(iv), the trust’s income would be computed without regard to subsection 39(2). We will also recommend that such an amendment apply for the 2003 and subsequent taxation years.

Of course, we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendation that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, we trust that this statement of our position is helpful.

Thank you for writing.

Brian Emewin, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(v) throughout the relevant periods, not more than 10% of its property consisted of bonds, securities or shares in the capital stock of any one corporation or debtor other than Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province or a Canadian municipality, and

(vi) where the trust would not be a unit trust at the particular time if this paragraph were read without reference to this subparagraph and subparagraph (iii) were read without reference to clause (F), the units of the trust are listed at any time in the current year or in the following taxation year on a designated stock exchange in Canada, or

(c) the fair market value of the property of the trust at the end of 1993 was primarily attributable to real property (or an interest in real property), the trust was a unit trust throughout any calendar year that ended before 1994 and the fair market value of the property of the trust at the particular time is primarily attributable to property described in paragraph (a) or (b) of the definition "qualified investment" in section 204, real property (or an interest in real property) or any combination of those properties.

Technical Notes: Subsection 108(7) contains a rule that, in general terms, provides that a person (or two or more related persons) can make a contribution to a trust and retain an interest under the trust without the interest being considered to have been acquired for consideration. (B) would have been a prescribed share if it were issued or sold to the taxpayer at the time the taxpayer disposed of rights under the agreement,

Proposed Amendment — 110(1)(d) — Stock option cash-outs

Federal Budget, Notice of Ways and Means Motion, March 4, 2010: (23) That, for transactions occurring after 4:00 pm Eastern Standard Time on March 4, 2010, paragraphs 110(1)(d) and (d.1) of the Act require, as a condition of eligibility for the deductions provided under those paragraphs (referred to in this paragraph as "the stock option deduction"), that the securities described in an agreement to sell or issue securities referred to in subsection 7(1) of the Act be acquired by the employee, unless

(a) the employer elects in prescribed form in respect of all stock options issued or to be issued after 4:00 pm Eastern Standard Time on March 4, 2010 under the agreement, and files such election with the Minister of National Revenue, that neither the employer, nor any person who does not deal at arm's length with the employer, will deduct any amount in respect of a payment, to or for the benefit of the employee, for the employee's disposition of rights under the agreement;

(b) the employer provides the employee with evidence in writing of such election; and

(c) the employee files such evidence with the Minister of National Revenue with his or her return of income for the year in which the stock option deduction is claimed.

(24) That, for dispositions of rights occurring after 4:00 pm Eastern Standard Time on March 4, 2010, it be clarified that the rules in subsection 7(1) of the Act apply in circumstances in which an employee (or a person who does not deal at arm's length with the employee) disposes of rights under an agreement to sell or issue securities to a person with whom the employee does not deal at arm's length.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: Stock Option Cash-Outs

If an employee acquires a security of his or her employer under a stock option agreement in the course of his or her employment, the difference between the fair market value of the security at the time the option is exercised and the amount paid by the employee to acquire the security is treated as a taxable employment benefit. If certain conditions are met, the employee is entitled to a deduction equal to one-half of the employment benefit (the stock option deduction).

The stock option deduction results in the taxation of stock option benefits at capital gains tax rates, and as such provides Canadian businesses with a valuable tool to attract and retain highly-skilled workers. In 2007, about 78,000 employees took advantage of the deduction, claiming an average amount of $53,000; three-quarters of the aggregate value of the deduction was claimed by individuals earning more than $500,000. [Table A5.3 with supporting statistics omitted — ed.]

Given the considerable tax benefits provided by the stock option deduction, particularly to high-income individuals, it is important to ensure that it is used in a manner consistent with its intended policy objectives.

The tax rules currently ensure that, when an employee acquires securities under a stock option agreement, only one deduction (at the employee level) is provided. This is because employers are, in this context, prevented from claiming a tax deduction for the issuance of a security [see 7(3)(b) and 143.3 — ed.].

It is possible, however, to structure employee stock option agreements so that, if employees dispose of ("cash out") their stock option rights for a cash payment from the employer (or other in-kind benefit), the employment benefit is eligible for the stock option deduction while the cash payment is fully deductible by the employer.

Budget 2010 proposes to prevent both the stock option deduction and a deduction by the employer from being claimed for the same employment benefit. To this effect, the stock option deduction will generally be available to employees only in situations where they exercise their options by acquiring securities of their employer. An employer may continue to allow employees to cash out their stock option rights to the corporation without affecting their eligibility for the stock option deduction provided the employer makes an election to forgo the deduction for the cash payment. This will ensure a comparable tax rate with that available on other compensation, when considered on a total employer-employee basis.

Federal tax collected on $100 of employment benefit ($)

	Type of benefit
	Stock option cash out
	Current		Proposed
	Bonus/Salary	Stock option exercise	With election	Without election
Employee	29	14.5	14.5	29
Employer	0	18	0	0
Total	29	32.5	14.5	29

Table notes:

- 1 Assumed to be taxed at 29 per cent (the highest federal personal income tax rate).
- 2 Assumed to be taxed at 18 per cent (the general federal corporate income tax rate for 2010).

The proposed measure will also help preserve symmetry in the tax treatment of stock-based compensation: that is, where preferential tax treatment is provided to the employee on stock-based benefits, the employer is generally not allowed a tax deduction for the cost of such benefits.

Tax treatment of stock-based compensation at the employer and employee level — Canada and United States

Type of Plan	Tax treatment of benefit
	Employer	Employee
Canada
Employee stock option plans	No deduction	50-per-cent deduction ¹
Cash incentive plans (e.g. phantom stock option plan)	Deduction	Full income inclusion
Share purchase plans	Deduction	Full income inclusion
Stock option cash outs
Current	Deduction	50-per-cent deduction
Proposed (without election)	Deduction	Full income inclusion
Proposed (with election)	No deduction	50-per-cent deduction
U.S.
Statutory (incentive) stock option plans ²	No deduction	Capital gains treatment
Non-qualifying stock option plans	Deduction	Full income inclusion
Stock option plan cash outs	Deduction	Full income inclusion

Table notes:

- 1 To qualify for the 50% deduction stock options have to meet certain general eligibility conditions (i.e. the option has to provide a right to purchase common shares, at a price that is no less than the fair market value of these shares at the time the option is granted, and the employee has to deal at arm's length with the employer).
- 2 There are a number of eligibility conditions and limitations associated with the use of these plans including a two-year minimum combined holding period for the option and acquired shares (with a one-year minimum holding period specifically applicable to the acquired shares), and annual vesting limits ($25,000 for qualifying share purchase plans and $100,000 for qualifying stock option plans). These restrictions significantly reduce the attractiveness of statutory plans and their use. As a result, non-qualifying plans are the most commonly used type of employee stock option plan in the U.S.

Budget 2010 also proposes [resolution (24) above — ed.] to amend the income tax rules to clarify that the disposition of rights under a stock option agreement to a non-arm's length person results in an employment benefit at the time of disposition (including cash out). Although the Government considers that these benefits are taxable in these circumstances under existing tax rules, the Government also believes that clarification of these rules is warranted.

These measures will apply to dispositions of employee stock options that occur after 4:00 pm Eastern Standard Time on March 4, 2010.

(k) Part VI.1 tax — $\frac{1}{4}$ of the tax payable under subsection 191.1(1) by the taxpayer for the year.

Proposed Amendment — 110(1)(k)

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 101(1), will amend para. 110(1)(k) to replace " $\frac{1}{4}$ of" with "three times", applicable to 2003 et seq.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 110(1)(k) provides a deduction in computing a corporation's taxable income equal to a multiple of the amount of any tax payable by it for the year under Part VI.1 of the Act on dividends it paid on taxable preferred shares. The deduction approximates the income that would have generated an amount of income tax equal to the Part VI.1 tax. The multiple used to produce this result is currently $\frac{1}{4}$, which implies a total federal and provincial income tax rate of 44.44%.

As part of a series of amendments reflecting recent and planned reductions in income tax rates, the multiple in paragraph 110(1)(k) is increased to 3. This amendment, which applies for the 2003 and subsequent taxation years, implies a total tax rate of 33.3%.

Proposed Amendment — 110(1.7), (1.8)

(1.7) Reduction in exercise price — If the amount payable by a taxpayer to acquire securities under an agreement referred to in subsection 7(1) is reduced at any particular time and the conditions in subsection (1.8) are satisfied in respect of the reduction,

(a) the rights (referred to in this subsection and subsection (1.8) as the "old rights") that the taxpayer had under the agreement immediately before the particular time are deemed to have been disposed of by the taxpayer immediately before the particular time;

(b) the rights (referred to in this subsection and subsection (1.8) as the "new rights") that the taxpayer has under the agreement at the particular time are deemed to be acquired by the taxpayer at the particular time; and

(c) the taxpayer is deemed to receive the new rights as consideration for the disposition of the old rights.

(1.8) Conditions for subsec. (1.7) to apply — The following are the conditions in respect of the reduction:

(a) that the taxpayer would not be entitled to a deduction under paragraph (1)(d) if the taxpayer acquired securities under the agreement immediately after the particular time and this section were read without reference to subsection (1.7); and

(b) that the taxpayer would be entitled to a deduction under paragraph (1)(d) if the taxpayer

(i) disposed of the old rights immediately before the particular time,

(ii) acquired the new rights at the particular time as consideration for the disposition, and

(iii) acquired securities under the agreement immediately after the particular time.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 101(2), will amend subsec. 110(1.7) to read as above and add subsec. (1.8), applicable to reductions that occur after 1998.

An election by a taxpayer under subsec. 7(10) to have subsec. 7(8) apply is deemed to have been filed in a timely manner if

(a) it is filed on or before the 60th day after former Bill C-10 is assented to;

(b) it is in respect of a security acquired by the taxpayer before former Bill C-10 is assented to;

(c) the taxpayer is entitled to a deduction under para. 110(1)(d) in respect of the acquisition; and

(d) the taxpayer would not have been so entitled if subsec. 110(1.7), as amended, did not apply.

I.T. Technical News: ITTN-38 (employee stock option deduction)

Technical Notes: Subsection 110(1.7) provides that the definitions in subsection 7(7) relating to employee security options also apply for the purposes of subsections 110(1.5) and 110(1.6). Since subsection 7(7) also provides for the definitions to so apply, existing subsection 110(1.7) is unnecessary and is repealed.

A new subsection 110(1.7) is added that applies in circumstances where there is a reduction in the amount (referred to in these notes as the "exercise price") payable by an employee to acquire securities under an employee security option and the conditions in new subsection 110(1.8) are satisfied.

This new subsection ensures that a reduction in the exercise price under an employee security option does not disqualify the employee from claiming the security option deduction under paragraph 110(1)(d), if the reduction could have been effected by way of an exchange of options without jeopardizing the employee's eligibility for the deduction.

Paragraph 110(1)(d) provides a deduction in computing taxable income in circumstances where subsection 7(1) deems an employee to have received a benefit from employment in connection with the exercise or disposition of rights under an employee option agreement. The deduction is currently equal to one-half of the amount of the employment benefit, and the effect of the deduction is to tax the benefit at a rate equivalent to the capital gains inclusion rate.

Paragraph 110(1)(d) sets out certain conditions that must be satisfied in order to qualify for the security option deduction. These conditions include a minimum exercise price requirement under the option giving rise to the benefit under subsection 7(1) and, if that option was acquired as a consequence of one or more qualifying exchanges of options, under each of the previous options. Thus, if a reduction in the exercise price under an employee security option causes the exercise price to fall below the minimum threshold established under paragraph 110(1)(d) for that option, the employee will not be entitled to claim the security option deduction.

However, there are situations in which an otherwise disqualifying reduction in an option exercise price could be effected by way of an exchange of options without jeopardizing the employee's eligibility for the deduction. This would be the case, for example, if the exercise price had originally been set at the fair market value (FMV) of the underlying securities at the time of grant, there is a subsequent decline in the FMV of the securities and the exercise price is adjusted to that lower FMV. The combined effect of subsections 110(1.7) and (1.8) is to deem such a reduction to have been effected by way of an exchange, thus ensuring that the employee remains eligible for the security option deduction.

In particular, new subsection 110(1.7) provides that, where there is a reduction in the exercise price under an employee security option and the conditions in subsection 110(1.8) are satisfied, the employee is deemed to have disposed of the rights under the option immediately before the reduction and to have acquired the amended rights immediately thereafter as consideration for the disposition.

New subsection 110(1.8) sets out two conditions that must be satisfied in order for new subsection 110(1.7) to apply.

- First, the employee would not qualify for the security option deduction if the option were exercised immediately after the exercise price reduction (and subsection 110(1.7) were disregarded).

- Second, the employee would have been eligible for the deduction had there, in fact, been an exchange of options and the employee exercised the option immediately after the exchange.

These conditions ensure that the provisions of subsection 110(1.7) apply only where an otherwise disqualifying reduction in the exercise price under an employee security option could have been effected by way of an exchange of options without so disqualifying the employee.

Example:

Pierre is granted an option to acquire ten shares of Company A at an exercise price of $100 a share, which is the FMV of such a share at that time. After a downturn of the business, the Company amends the option to reduce the exercise price to $30 a share, which is the new FMV of such a share.

Results:

Without the benefit of subsection 110(1.7), paragraph 110(1)(d) would require that the exercise price under the option at the time of exercise be no less than the FMV of the underlying share at the time the option was granted. Since the exercise price of $30 would be less than the FMV of $100 at the time the option was issued, this condition would not be met and Pierre would not be eligible for the security option deduction.

If the reduction had been effected by way of an exchange of options, there would have been no increase in the net benefit associated with the option (i.e., the difference between the FMV of the shares under the "new option" and the "new exercise price" ($300 - $300 = $0) would have been no greater than the difference between the FMV of the shares under the "old option" and the "old exercise price" ($300 - $1,000 = $0)). Thus, the exchange would have been an exchange to which subsection 7(1.4) applied.

If Pierre had exercised the new option immediately after the exchange, paragraph 110(1)(d) would have required that the following exercise price tests be met:

- The exercise price under the old option at the time it was disposed of would have to be not less than the FMV of the underlying shares when the option was granted. Since the exercise price of $100 was equal to the FMV at the date of grant, this condition would have been met.

- The exercise price under the new option at the time of exercise would have to be not less than the exercise price set when the new option was acquired. Since Pierre would have paid $30 a share on exercise, which was the exercise price established when the new option was acquired, this condition would have been met.

Thus, if the reduction had been effected by way of an exchange and Pierre had exercised the option immediately after the exchange, he would have been eligible for the security option deduction.

Since the requirements of subsection 110(1.8) are satisfied, subsection 110(1.7) applies to deem the reduction to have been effected by way of an exchange. Consequently, the reduction will not disqualify Pierre from claiming the stock option deduction.

Extended Deadline for Deferral Election

Where certain conditions are satisfied, subsection 7(8) allows an employee to defer taxation of a security option benefit to the year in which the employee disposes of the security. One condition is that the employee be eligible to claim the deduction under paragraph 110(1)(d) in respect of the benefit. Another condition is that the employee files an election to defer before January 16th of the year following the year in which the option is exercised (or before August 14, 2001 for securities acquired in 2000).

The coming-into-force provisions for subsections 110(1.7) and (1.8) extend the deferral election deadline for securities which are acquired before this legislation receives Royal Assent, and which become qualified for the deduction under paragraph 110(1)(d) only by reason of amended subsection 110(1.7), to the later of

- the election deadline that would otherwise apply, and
- the day that is 60 days after Royal Assent.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, July 13, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

This is in response to your letters of August 5, 1999 and October 3, 2000 concerning the stock option deduction provided under paragraph 110(1)(d) of the Income Tax Act (Act).

As you know, we are prepared to recommend that the Act be amended to ensure that an employee is not disqualified from claiming the stock option deduction because of a reduction in the option exercise price to an amount below the value of the underlying share when the option was granted, provided the reduction could have been accomplished by way of an exchange of options to which subsection 7(1.4) of the Act would have applied. The effect of the amendment would be to allow paragraph 110(1)(d) to apply as though there had, in fact, been such an exchange of options. By requiring that the hypothetical option exchange satisfy the conditions of subsection 7(1.4), this relief would be limited to those situations in which the reduction in exercise price provides no immediate increase in the net benefit associated with the option. We will recommend that this amendment, if adopted, apply to reductions in exercise price occurring after 1998.

We are also prepared to recommend the [sic] section 6204 of the Income Tax Regulations be amended. That section sets out certain conditions that must be met in order for an employee who has acquired a stock option share to be eligible for the stock option deduction. One of the conditions [Reg. 6204(1)(b) — ed.] is that there be no reasonable expectation, at the time the share is acquired, that the paid-up capital (PUC) of the share will be reduced in the following two years, although an exception is made for a reduction in PUC that may be expected to occur in the context of an amalgamation or wind-up of a subsidiary.

We will recommend that an exception also be made for a reduction in PUC that may be expected to occur in the context of a distribution which, because of subsection 84(2) of the Act, would not be recharacterized as a dividend for tax purposes. This would ensure that an employee who acquires a stock option share of a Canadian-resident corporation, while the corporation is in the process of a reorganization, discontinuance or wind-up, is not precluded from claiming the stock option deduction simply because that activity may give rise to a reasonable expectation of a distribution by the corporation and an associated reduction in PUC. We will recommend that this amendment, if adopted, apply with respect to options exercised after 1998.

Thank you for bringing these matters to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Emewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 29, 2002:

Dear [xxx],

This is in response to your letter of March 12, 2002 concerning proposed amendments to the Income Tax Act to ensure that an employee is not disqualified from claiming the stock option deduction under paragraph 110(1)(d) of the Act because of a reduction in the option exercise price.

As you know, it is intended that the proposed relief be provided in those situations where a disqualifying reduction in exercise price could have been effected by way of an exchange of options without jeopardizing an employee's eligibility for the stock option deduction. This would require that the hypothetical exchange satisfy the conditions of subsection 7(1.4) of the Act, which means that there must be no immediate increase in the net benefit associated with the option. We expect to recommend that relief be provided in these situations by deeming the amendment to have been effected by way of an exchange of options.

You have noted that, in order to reflect a diminishment in share value following a spin-off transaction, a corporation will commonly amend outstanding employee stock options to both reduce the exercise price and increase the number of shares, and that such amendments are structured so that there is no increase in the net benefit associated with the stock option. You have asked if the proposed relieving provision is meant to apply in such a situation, or if the fact that there is a share increase in conjunction with the exercise price reduction will serve to deny access to the provision.

I wish to confirm that there is no intent to preclude the application of the relieving provision to an amendment that reduces the exercise price under a stock option simply because the amendment also increases the number of shares covered by the option. However, as with a simple reduction in exercise price, the proposed relieving provision is intended to apply only if the stock option amendment could have been effected by way of an exchange of options without jeopardizing access to the stock option deduction. Consequently, a prerequisite for the proposed provision to apply is that the combined changes not result in an increase in the net benefit associated with the option.

I wish to thank you for writing and trust that this letter provides you with the clarification you require.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Emewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

110.1 (1) Deduction for [charitable] gifts [by corporation] — For the purpose of computing the taxable income of a corporation for a taxation year, there may be deducted such of the following amounts as the corporation claims:

Proposed Amendment — 110.1(1)(a) opening words

(a) charitable gifts — the total of all amounts each of which is the eligible amount of a gift (other than a gift described in paragraph (b), (c) or (d)) made by the corporation in the year or in any of the five preceding taxation years to

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 102(1), will amend the opening words of para. 110.1(1)(a) to read as above, applicable to gifts made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Section 110.1 provides a deduction in computing taxable income in respect of gifts made by corporations to registered charities and to certain other entities. Section 110.1 is amended to expand the entities referred to in this section to include municipal or public bodies performing a function of government in Canada. This amendment is in response to the Quebec Court of Appeal decision in Tawich Development Corporation v. Deputy Minister of Revenue of Quebec, 2001 D.T.C. 5144. For additional information, see the commentary to paragraph 149(1)(d.5).

Section 110.1 is also amended as a consequence of the addition of new subsections 248(30) to (38). Generally, those subsections clarify the circumstances under which a transfer of property will be considered a gift notwithstanding that the transferor may be entitled to receive an advantage or benefit in respect of the property. New subsection 248(31) generally provides that the “eligible amount” of the gift is the excess of the fair market value of a property transferred by way of gift over the value of the advantage or benefit, if any, to which the transferor is entitled. For additional information, see the commentary to new subsections 248(30) to (39).

Paragraphs 110.1(1)(a) to (d) provide, respectively, for the deduction by a corporation of amounts in respect of “charitable gifts”, “gifts to Her Majesty”, “gifts to institutions” and “ecological gifts”. The amount deductible by the corporation is generally the fair market value of the gift. These paragraphs are amended, consequential to the addition of new subsection 248(31), to provide that the amount deductible by the corporation is generally the “eligible amount” of a gift.

In addition, paragraphs 110.1(1)(a) and 110.1(1)(d) are expanded to provide that a deduction is available in respect of gifts made by corporations to municipal or public bodies performing a function of government in Canada.

Paragraph 110.1(1)(d) is also amended to clarify its application to “real servitudes” under the Civil Code of Quebec.

(2) Proof of gift — A gift shall not be included for the purpose of determining a deduction under subsection (1) unless the making of the gift is proven by filing with the Minister

Proposed Amendment — 110.1(2) opening words

(2) Proof of gift — An eligible amount of a gift shall not be included for the purpose of determining a deduction under subsection (1) unless the making of the gift is evidenced by filing with the Minister

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 102(7), will amend the opening words of subsec. 110.1(2) to read as above, applicable to gifts made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 110.1(2) provides that a corporation may not deduct an amount in respect of a gift unless the gift is evidenced by a receipt containing prescribed information. The subsection is amended, concurrently with subsection 110.1(1), to refer to the "eligible amount" of a gift.

It is proposed that subsections 3501(1), (1.1) and (6) of the Regulations be amended to provide that every official receipt issued by a registered organization in respect of a gift contain, in addition to the information already prescribed, the amount of the advantage, if any, and the eligible amount of the gift.

For additional details, see the commentary to new subsections 248(31) and (32) regarding the eligible amount and the amount of the advantage in respect of a gift.

(a) a receipt for the gift that contains prescribed information;

(3) Gifts of capital property — Where at any time

(a) a corporation makes a gift of

(i) capital property to a donee described in paragraph (1)(a), (b) or (d), or

(ii) in the case of a corporation not resident in Canada, real property situated in Canada to a prescribed donee who provides an undertaking, in a form satisfactory to the Minister, to the effect that the property will be held for use in the public interest, and

(b) the fair market value of the property at that time exceeds its adjusted cost base to the corporation, such amount, not greater than the fair market value otherwise determined and not less than the adjusted cost base to the corporation of the property at that time, as the corporation designates in its return of income under section 150 for the year in which the gift is made is, if the making of the gift is proven by filing with the Minister a receipt containing prescribed information, deemed to be its proceeds of disposition of the property and, for the purposes of subsection (1), the fair market value of the gift made by the corporation.

Proposed Amendment — 110.1(2.1), (3)

(2.1) Where subsec. (3) applies — Subsection (3) applies in circumstances where

(a) a corporation makes a gift at any time of

(i) capital property to a donee described in paragraph (1)(a), (b) or (d), or

(ii) in the case of a corporation not resident in Canada, real or immovable property situated in Canada to a prescribed donee who provides an undertaking, in a form satisfactory to the Minister, to the effect that the property will be held for use in the public interest; and

(b) the fair market value of the property otherwise determined at that time exceeds

(i) in the case of depreciable property of a prescribed class, the lesser of the undepreciated capital cost of that class at the end of the taxation year of the corporation that includes that time (determined without reference to the proceeds of disposition designated in respect of the property under subsection (3)) and the adjusted cost base to the corporation of the property immediately before that time, and

(ii) in any other case, the adjusted cost base to the corporation of the property immediately before that time.

Related Provisions: 118.1(5.4) — Parallel rule for individuals; 248(35)–(39) — Value of gift limited to cost if acquired within 3 years or as tax shelter.

(3) Gifts of capital property — If this subsection applies in respect of a gift by a corporation of property, and the corporation designates an amount in respect of the gift in its return of income under section 150 for the year in which the gift is made, the amount so designated is deemed to be its proceeds of disposition of the property and, for the purpose of subsection 248(31), the fair market value of the gift, but the amount so designated may not exceed the fair market value of the property otherwise determined and may not be less than the greater of

(a) in the case of a gift made after December 20, 2002, the amount of the advantage, if any, in respect of the gift, and

(b) the amount determined under subparagraph (2.1)(b)(i) or (ii), as the case may be, in respect of the property.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 102(8), will add subsec. 110.1(2.1) and amend subsec. (3) to read as above, applicable to gifts made after 1999 except that, for gifts made after 1999 and before December 21, 2002, the expression “subsection 248(31)” in subsec. 110.1(3) shall be read as “subsection (1)”.

Technical Notes: Subsection 110.1(3) provides that, if a corporation donates capital property to a charity, it may designate a value between the adjusted cost base and the fair market value of the donated property to be treated both as the proceeds of disposition for the purpose of calculating its capital gain and the amount of the gift for the purpose of the deduction allowed for charitable donations under subsection 110.1(1).

Subsection 110.1(3) is restructured as new subsection 110.1(2.1) and revised subsection 110.1(3). New subsection 110.1(2.1) describes the circumstances under which amended subsection 110.1(3), which remains generally unchanged, will apply. However, where the property is depreciable property, subsection 110.1(2.1) includes those situations where the actual value of the gifted property is between the undepreciated capital cost of that class at the end of the taxation year of the corporation and the fair market value of the donated property.

Amended subsection 110.1(3) provides for the amount that may be designated by the corporation. As with the former provision, the amount designated is considered to be the corporation's proceeds of disposition of the gift. The subsection also continues to provide that the amount designated is treated as the fair market value of the property transferred by way of gift. However, under the amended version, this is for the purpose of new subsection 248(31) instead of for subsection 110.1(1). New subsection 248(31) generally provides that the “eligible amount” of a gift is the excess of the fair market value of a property transferred by way of gift over the value of the advantage or benefit, if any, to which the transferor is entitled. The “eligible amount” is relevant to the determination of the amount deductible under subsection 110.1(1) by the corporation.

Finally, amended subsection 110.1(3) allows a corporation to reduce the amount of recaptured depreciation that might otherwise be calculated in respect of a gift of depreciable property, with a corresponding reduction to the eligible amount deductible under subsection 110.1(1) in respect of the gift. However, the designated amount may not be lower than the amount of any actual proceeds of disposition in respect of the property (or, more specifically, the amount of the advantage in respect of the gift, as defined in new subsection 248(32)).

In particular, the amount designated by the corporation in respect of the property transferred may not exceed the fair market value of the property otherwise determined, and may not be less than the greater of

- the amount of the advantage, if any, in respect of the gift, and
- the adjusted cost base of the property or, if the property is depreciable property of the corporation, the undepreciated capital cost of the class of the property at the end of the corporation's taxation year (determined without reference to the proceeds of disposition designated in respect of the property).

See also the example in the commentary to subsections 118.1(5.4) and (6), which apply similarly to individuals as do subsections 110.1(2.1) and (3) to corporations.

For additional details regarding the eligible amount and the amount of the advantage in respect of a gift, see the commentary to new subsections 248(31) and (32).

Proposed Amendment — 110.1(4)

(4) Gifts made by partnership — If at the end of a fiscal period of a partnership a corporation is a member of the partnership, its share of any amount that would, if the partnership were a person, be the eligible amount of a gift made by the partnership to any donee is, for the purpose of this section, deemed to be the eligible amount of a gift made to that donee by the corporation in its taxation year in which the fiscal period of the partnership ends.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 102(9), will amend subsec. 110.1(4) to read as above, applicable to gifts made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 110.1(4) allows the attribution of gifts made by a partnership to its corporate members, according to each member's share in the partnership. Subsection 110.1(4) is amended, consequential to the addition of new subsection 248(31), in respect of gifts made by a partnership after December 20, 2002, to refer to the “eligible amount” of a gift made because of a corporation's membership in a partnership.

Technical Notes: Subsection 110.1(5) provides that the fair market value of a gift of ecologically sensitive land (or a covenant, easement or servitude in respect of ecologically sensitive land) is deemed to be the amount determined by the Minister of the Environment. Paragraph 110.1(5)(b) provides that the amount so determined in respect of a covenant, easement or servitude will not be considered to be less than the decrease in value of the subject land that resulted from the making of the gift.

Paragraph 110.1(5)(b) is amended to clarify its application to “real servitudes” under the Civil Code of Quebec.

Proposed Amendment — 110.6(1) "qualified farm property" (a) opening words

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 20, 2008: Mr. L. Dean Gallimore, KPMG LLP

Dear Mr. Gallimore:

I am writing in response to your letter of December 20, 2007 in which you identified an issue with respect to a change in the application of the definition of "qualified farm property" in subsection 110.6(1) of the Income Tax Act (Act). In your letter you noted that the addition of the word "principally" in paragraph (a) of the definition of "qualified farm property" may result in an overly restrictive interpretation of the definition of "qualified farm property" under the Act.

We agree with your concern that the new definition of "qualified farm property" in subsection 110.6(1) of the Act may be overly restrictive with regard to the circumstances under which property will meet the definition of "qualified farm property" under the Act. As such, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister that paragraph (a) of the definition of "qualified farm property" in subsection 110.6(1) of the Act be amended to remove the word "principally". If our recommendation is acted upon, we anticipate that the amendments would be included in a future technical bill and would apply with respect to taxation years that end on or after May 6, 2006. While I cannot offer any assurance that the Minister will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Technical Notes: Subsection 110.6(14) provides certain rules that apply for the purposes of the definition "qualified small business corporation share" in subsection 110.6(1) and the capital gains exemption in respect of such shares. This subsection is amended to add new paragraph 110.6(14)(d.1).

New paragraph 110.6(14)(d.1) deems a person who is a member of a partnership that is a member of another partnership (a lower-tiered partnership) to be a member of the lower-tiered partnership. This amendment will permit such a taxpayer to have access to the deduction for taxable capital gains arising on the disposition of a qualified small business corporation share by the lower-tiered partnership.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Aug. 17, 2001:

Monsieur,

La présente fait suite à votre lettre du 18 janvier 2001 relativement à la déduction pour gains en capital pour les actions admissibles de petite entreprise.

Les commentaires que vous avez formulés soulignent le caractère restrictif de l'alinéa 110.6(14)(d) de la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu (LIR). Présentement la LIR stipule qu'une société de personnes est réputée liée à une personne pendant chaque période tout au long de laquelle cette personne est une associé de la société de personnes. Elle ne permet donc pas à un particulier qui est l'associé d'une société de personnes, qui elle-même est l'associée d'une autre société de personnes qui dispose d'actions admissibles de petite entreprise, de bénéficier de la déduction pour gain en capital prévue au paragraphe 110.6(2.1) de la LIR puisque cet associé n'est pas réputé lié à cette dernière.

La politique fiscale qui sous-tend cette mesure m'amène toutefois à considérer que la déduction pour gains en capital pour les actions admissibles de petite entreprise ne devrait pas être refusée dans le cas susmentionné. Par conséquent, je suis disposé à recommander que la LIR soit modifiée en ce sens.

Veuillez agréer, Monsieur, l'expression de mes sentiments les meilleurs.

Le directeur de la Division de la législation de l'impôt,

Brian Ernevein

(B) in respect of each of the 1994 and 1995 taxation years,

(I) where no part of the taxable capital gain resulting from an election by the elector is included in computing the income of a spouse or common-law partner of the elector, would not result in the amount determined under paragraph (3)(a) for the year in respect of the elector being exceeded by the lesser of the amounts determined under paragraphs (3)(b) and (c) for the year in respect of the elector, and

(1.1) [Adjustments to] Net capital losses — Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(b), the amount that may be deducted under that paragraph in computing a taxpayer's taxable income for a particular taxation year is the total of

(a) the lesser of

(i) the amount, if any, determined under paragraph 3(b) in respect of the taxpayer for the particular year, and

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount claimed under paragraph (1)(b) for the particular year by the taxpayer in respect of a net capital loss for a taxation year (in this paragraph referred to as the “loss year”);

B is the fraction that would be used for the particular year under section 38 in respect of the taxpayer if the taxpayer had a capital loss for the particular year; and

C is the fraction required to be used under section 38 in respect of the taxpayer for the loss year; and

(b) where the taxpayer is an individual, the least of

(i) $2,000,

(ii) the taxpayer's pre-1986 capital loss balance for the particular year, and

(iii) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the amount claimed under paragraph (1)(b) in respect of the taxpayer's net capital losses for the particular year exceeds

(B) the total of the amounts in respect of the taxpayer's net capital losses that, using the formula in subparagraph (a)(ii), would be required to be claimed under paragraph (1)(b) for the particular year to produce the amount determined under paragraph (a) for the particular year.

Proposed Addition — 111(1.1)(c)

(c) the amount, if any, that the Minister determines to be reasonable in the circumstances, after considering the application of subsections 104(21.6), 130.1(4), 131(1) and 138.1(3.2) to the taxpayer for the particular year.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 104(1), will add para. 111(1.1)(c), applicable to 2000 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 111(1.1) determines the amount that a taxpayer may deduct in respect of a net capital loss claimed under paragraph 111(1)(b). The 2000 Budget and the 2000 Economic Statement provided for the reduction of the capital gains inclusion rate from $\frac{3}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ and then to $\frac{1}{2}$, respectively. This reduction in the inclusion rate gave rise to changes to the adjusting factors in subsection 111(1.1). An additional amendment is made to subsection 111(1.1) to permit the Minister of National Revenue to determine a reasonable amount of deduction in respect of net capital loss carryovers where the other rules in that subsection produce inappropriate results.

Related Provisions: 111(2) — Year of death. See also at end of s. 111.

History: Subsec. 111(1.1) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 83(1), applicable to the computation of taxable income for 1985 et seq. Subsec. 111(1.1) formerly read:

(1.1) Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(b), where a taxpayer has claimed an amount under that paragraph for a particular taxation year in respect of the taxpayer's net capital losses, the amount that may be deducted under that paragraph in respect of those losses for that year is the lesser of

(a) the total of

(i) the amount, if any, determined under paragraph 3(b) in respect of the taxpayer for the particular year, and

(ii) where the taxpayer is an individual, the lesser of

(A) $2,000, and

(B) the taxpayer's pre-1986 capital loss balance for the particular year; and

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount of a net capital loss for a taxation year (in this paragraph referred to as a "loss year") claimed under paragraph (1)(b),

B is the fraction that would be used for the particular year under section 38 in respect of the taxpayer if the taxpayer had a capital loss for that year, and

C is the fraction required to be used under section 38 in respect of the taxpayer for the loss year.

(b) paragraph (1.1)(b) shall be read as follows:

"(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount claimed under paragraph (1)(b) in respect of the taxpayer's net capital losses for the particular year

exceeds the total of

(ii) all amounts in respect of the taxpayer's net capital losses that, using the formula in subparagraph (a)(ii), would be required to be claimed under paragraph (1)(b) for the particular year to produce the amount determined under paragraph (a) for the particular year, and

(iii) all amounts each of which is an amount deducted under section 110.6 in computing the taxpayer's taxable income for a taxation year, except to the extent that, where the particular year is the year in which the taxpayer died, the amount, if any, by which the amount determined under subparagraph (i) in respect of the taxpayer for the immediately preceding taxation year exceeds the amount so determined under subparagraph (ii)."

History: Subsec. 111(2) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 83(1), applicable to the computation of taxable income for 1985 et seq. Subsec. 111(2) formerly read:

(2) Where a taxpayer dies in a taxation year, for the purposes of computing the taxpayer's taxable income for that year and the immediately preceding taxation year, subsection (1.1) shall be read as follows:

(a) an amount not exceeding the amount, if any, determined under paragraph 3(b) in respect of the taxpayer for the particular year, equal to the total of all amounts each of which is an amount determined by the formula

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount of the taxpayer's net capital losses claimed under paragraph (1)(b) for the particular year

(3) Limitation on deductibility — For the purposes of subsection (1),

(a) an amount in respect of a non-capital loss, restricted farm loss, farm loss or limited partnership loss, as the case may be, for a taxation year is deductible, and an amount in respect of a net capital loss for a taxation year may be claimed, in computing the taxable income of a taxpayer for a particular taxation year only to the extent that it exceeds the total of

(i) amounts deducted under this section in respect of that non-capital loss, restricted farm loss, farm loss or limited partnership loss in computing taxable income for taxation years preceding the particular taxation year,

(i.1) the amount that was claimed under paragraph (1)(b) in respect of that net capital loss for taxation years preceding the particular taxation year, and

(ii) amounts claimed in respect of that loss under paragraph 186(1)(c) for the year in which the loss was incurred or under paragraph 186(1)(d) for the particular taxation year and taxation years preceding the particular taxation year, and

(b) no amount is deductible in respect of a non-capital loss, net capital loss, restricted farm loss, farm loss or limited partnership loss, as the case may be, for a taxation year until

(i) in the case of a non-capital loss, the deductible non-capital losses,

(ii) in the case of a net capital loss, the deductible net capital losses,

(iv) in the case of a farm loss, the deductible farm losses, and

(v) in the case of a limited partnership loss, the deductible limited partnership losses, for preceding taxation years have been deducted.

Possible Future Amendment — Corporate loss consolidations

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: Taxation of Corporate Groups

Over the last several years, the Government has taken significant steps to improve the competitiveness of the tax system for Canadian businesses, and followed through on Advantage Canada commitments to reduce taxes on business investment. However, there are still specific structural elements of the tax system where it may be possible to make improvements. For example, the Government has heard various concerns from the business community and from the provinces regarding the utilization of tax losses within corporate groups. Going forward, the Government will explore whether new rules for the taxation of corporate groups — such as the introduction of a formal system of loss transfers or consolidated reporting — could improve the functioning of the tax system. Stakeholder views will be sought prior to the introduction of any changes.

Ontario Budget, March 25, 2010: Taxation of Corporate Groups

The 2009 Budget presented a plan to modernize Ontario's tax system that will significantly improve Ontario's competitiveness for new business investment. The implementation of a single corporate tax administration has also streamlined the cost of doing business in Ontario. The McGuinty government continues to look for ways to improve the tax system and strengthen the long-term competitiveness of Ontario's economy.

In its 2010 budget, the federal government made a commitment to explore new rules for the taxation of corporate groups, such as consolidated reporting. Ontario welcomes this review and the federal government's acknowledgment of concerns raised by provincial governments regarding the utilization of tax losses within corporate groups. Ontario looks forward to working collaboratively with the federal government to explore options to address the impact these transactions have on provincial tax and inter-provincial income allocation.

In advance of any formal changes to the tax system, Ontario calls on the federal government, in administering Ontario's corporate taxes, to ensure that tax losses are utilized by a corporation in the province where the loss takes place. This will ensure losses are treated in a fair and reasonable manner and do not distort the principles of interprovincial income allocation. Ontario will consider taking action, where appropriate and within its administrative purview, to ensure these principles are upheld.

(5.5) Restriction — Where control of a corporation has been acquired by a person or group of persons and it may reasonably be considered that the main reason for the acquisition of control was to cause paragraph (4)(d) or subsection (5.1), (5.2) or (5.3) to apply with respect to the acquisition,

(6) Limitation — For the purposes of this section and paragraph 53(1)(i), any loss of a taxpayer for a taxation year from a farming business shall, after the taxpayer disposes of the land used in that farming business and to the extent that the amount of the loss is required by paragraph 53(1)(i) to be added in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the land immediately before the disposition, be deemed not to be a loss.

(7) Idem — For the purposes of this section, any loss of a taxpayer for a taxation year from a farming business shall, to the extent that the loss is included in the amount of any deduction permitted by section 101 in computing the taxpayer's income for any subsequent taxation year, be deemed not to be a loss of the taxpayer for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's taxable income for that subsequent year or any taxation year subsequent thereto.

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) its 1975 branch accounting election deficiency exceeds

(ii) the total of

(7.2) Non-capital loss of life insurer — Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(a), in the case of a life insurer the amount deductible in computing its taxable income for its 1978 and subsequent taxation years,

(a) in respect of its non-capital loss for each taxation year ending before 1977 shall be deemed to be nil; and

(b) in respect of its non-capital loss for its 1977 taxation year shall be deemed to be the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount referred to in subparagraph 138(4.2)(a)(iv)

exceeds the total of

- (ii) the amount of the reserve determined for the purpose of subparagraph 138(4.2)(a)(i),

Proposed Addition — 111(7.3)–(7.5)

(7.3) Non-capital losses of employee life and health trusts — Paragraph (1)(a) does not apply in computing the taxable income of a trust for a taxation year if the trust is, in the year, an employee life and health trust.

Related Provisions: 111(7.4) — Carryback and carryforward for ELHT.

(7.4) Non-capital losses of employee life and health trusts — For the purposes of computing the taxable income of an employee life and health trust for a taxation year, there may be deducted such portion as the trust may claim of the trust's non-capital losses for the three taxation years immediately preceding and the three taxation years immediately following the year.

Related Provisions: 111(7.3) — Regular non-capital loss carryovers not allowed; 111(8) "non-capital loss" (a.1) — Amount deductible in calculating loss of employee life and health trust; 144.1(10) — Non-capital losses to EHLT only as allowed by 111(7.3)–(7.5).

(7.5) Non-capital losses of employee life and health trusts — Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(a), if a trust was an employee life and health trust before a taxation year but is not an employee life and health trust for the year, no amount in respect of the trust's non-capital losses for a taxation year in which the trust was an employee life and health trust may be deducted in computing the trust's taxable income for the year.

Application: The February 26, 2010 draft legislation (ELHTs), subsec. 10(1), will add subssecs. 111(7.3) to (7.5), applicable after 2009.

Technical Notes: Under the amended definition "non-capital loss" in subsection 111(8), employee life and health trusts will be able to create or increase a non-capital loss with payments of "designated employee benefits" (as defined in new subsection 144.1(1)).

This mechanism is being introduced in recognition that the income of an ELHT for a year will not always reflect its obligations to provide designated employee benefits for the year.

However, the effect of this amendment to the definition "non-capital loss" will also be to enable such a trust to create a loss in relation to a distribution of the capital of the trust. Consequently, a shorter carry-forward period is provided, which it is anticipated will be sufficient to allow employee life and health trusts to avoid paying income tax in most situations where they have not been overfunded.

New subsection 111(7.3) provides that the normal loss carryover rules in paragraph 111(1)(a) do not apply to an ELHT.

New subsection 111(7.4) establishes a three-year carryforward and three-year carryback period for non-capital losses of an ELHT.

New subsection 111(7.5) prevents a "tainted" employee life and health trust (i.e. a trust that was an employee life and health trust but which does not meet the conditions in new subsection 144.1(2) for a particular year) from deducting any amount, in respect of its non-capital losses from years in which it was an ELHT, while it is "tainted". ELHT status is a year-by-year determination.

If an election under paragraph (b) above is made by the corporation in respect of an acquisition of control, a designation under para. 111(4)(e) by the corporation for its taxation year that ended immediately before the acquisition of control is deemed to have been made in a timely manner if that designation is made on or before the corporation's filing due-date for its taxation year that includes March 12, 2009.

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is the taxpayer's loss for the year from a farming or fishing business

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is the taxpayer's income for the year from a farming or fishing business, and

- (b) the amount that would be the taxpayer's non-capital loss for the year if each of the amounts determined for C and D in the definition "non-capital loss" in this subsection were zero, and

- B is the amount, if any, by which any amount specified by the taxpayer in the taxpayer's election for the year under subsection 110.4(2) exceeds the amount that would be the taxpayer's non-capital loss for the year if the amount determined for C in the definition "non-capital loss" in this subsection were zero, and

The formula in the definition "farm loss" in subsec. 111(8) amended to add C, and the description of C added, by 1995, c. 21, subssecs. 36(1), (2), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994.

(b) after 2005, if the corporation so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the corporation's filing due-date for the corporation's taxation year that includes March 12, 2009.

If an election under paragraph (b) above is made by the corporation in respect of an acquisition of control, a designation under para. 111(4)(e) by the corporation for its taxation year that ended immediately before the acquisition of control is deemed to have been made in a timely manner if that designation is made on or before the corporation's filing due-date for its taxation year that includes March 12, 2009.

(c) of the description of C is to be read as follows:

- (c) where the taxpayer is a corporation the control of which was acquired by a person or group of persons before the end of the year and after the end of the taxpayer's seventh preceding taxation year, nil, and

The description of C formerly read:

- C is the least of

(a) the amount of the allowable business investment losses of the taxpayer for the taxpayer's seventh preceding taxation year,

"non-capital loss" of a taxpayer for a taxation year means, at any time, the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount determined by the formula

$$E - F$$

where

E is the total of all amounts each of which is

- (a) the taxpayer's loss for the year from an office, employment, business or property,

Proposed Addition — 111(8) "non-capital loss" E(a.1)

(a.1) an amount deductible under paragraph 104(6)(a.4) in computing the taxpayer's income for the year;

Application: The February 26, 2010 draft legislation (ELHTs), subsec. 10(2), will add para. (a.1) to the description of E in the definition "non-capital loss" in subsec. 111(8), applicable after 2009.

Technical Notes: Variable E in the definition "non-capital loss" is amended to allow an employment life and health trust to include, in calculating its non-capital loss for a year, amounts payable in the year as "designated employee benefits". A non-capital loss of an employee life and health trust or a former employee life and health trust is subject to special rules under new subsections 111 (7.3) to (7.5). (b) an amount deducted under paragraph (1)(b) or section 110.6, or deductible under any of paragraphs 110(1)(d) to (d.3), (f), (g), (j) and (k), section 112 and subsections 113(1) and 138(6), in computing the taxpayer's taxable income for the year, or

(c) if that time is before the taxpayer's eleventh following taxation year, the taxpayer's allowable business investment loss for the year, and

Proposed Amendment — 111(8) "non-capital loss" A:E

Application: The October 31, 2003 draft legislation (REOP), s. 4, would have amended the description of E in the definition "non-capital loss" in subsec. 111(8) to change "from an office" to "from a source that is an office", applicable to taxation years that begin after 2004.

Technical Notes: Both of these changes [see also 3(d) — ed.] are consequential amendments to proposed new subsection 3.1(1), and clarify that it is only losses that are from a source that may be deducted in computing a taxpayer's income or considered to be non-capital losses under subsection 111(8).

F is the amount determined under paragraph 3(c) in respect of the taxpayer for the year,

B is the amount, if any, determined in respect of the taxpayer for the year under section 110.5 or subparagraph 115(1)(a)(vii),

C [Repealed]

D is the amount that would be the taxpayer's farm loss for the year if the amount determined for B in the definition "farm loss" in this subsection were zero,

D.1 is the total of all amounts deducted under subsection (10) in respect of the taxpayer for the year, and

D.2 is the total of all amounts by which the non-capital loss of the taxpayer for the year is required to be reduced because of section 80;

History: The portion of the definition "non-capital loss" in subsec. 111(8) before the description of F amended by 2006, c. 4, subsec. 57(3), applicable in respect of losses that arise in 2006 et seq. The portion formerly read:

"pre-1986 capital loss balance" of an individual for a particular taxation year means the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount determined by the formula

$$F - G$$

F is the individual's net capital loss for a taxation year ending before 1985, and

G is the total of all amounts claimed under this section by the individual in respect of that loss in computing the individual's taxable income for taxation years preceding the particular taxation year, and

B is the amount determined by the formula

$$H - I$$

where

H is the lesser of

(a) the amount of the individual's net capital loss for the 1985 taxation year, and

(b) the amount, if any, by which the amount determined under subparagraph 3(e)(ii) of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, in respect of the individual for the 1985 taxation year exceeds the amount deductible by reason of paragraph 3(e) of that Act in computing the individual's taxable income for the 1985 taxation year, and

I is the total of all amounts claimed under this section by the individual in respect of the individual's net capital loss for the 1985 taxation year in computing the individual's taxable income for taxation years preceding the particular taxation year,

C is the total of all amounts deducted under section 110.6 in computing the individual's taxable income for taxation years that end before 1988 or after October 17, 2000,

Proposed Amendment — 111(8) "pre-1986 capital loss balance"

C is the total of all amounts deducted under section 110.6 in computing the individual's taxable income for taxation years that ended before 1988 or begin after October 17, 2000,

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 104(2), will amend the description of C in the definition "pre-1986 capital loss balance" in subsec. 111(8) to read as above, applicable to 2000 et seq.

Technical Notes: An individual's "pre-1986 capital loss balance" for a taxation year is relevant for the purpose of paragraph 111(1.1)(b) and represents the individual's unused pre-1986 capital losses that the individual can deduct, to a maximum of $2,000 per year, from income other than capital gains of the individual. The reference in the description of C in the definition to "taxation years that end before 1988 or after October 17, 2000" is corrected to refer to "taxation years that end before 1988 or begin after October 17, 2000".

D is $\frac{3}{4}$ of the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deducted under section 110.6 in computing the individual's taxable income for a taxation year, preceding the particular year, that

- (a) ended after 1987 and before 1990, or
- (b) began after February 27, 2000 and ended before October 18, 2000,

E is $\frac{2}{3}$ of the total of all amounts deducted under section 110.6 in computing the individual's taxable income for taxation years, preceding the particular year, that ended after 1989 and before February 28, 2000, and

E.1 is amount determined by the formula

$$J \times (0.5/K)$$

where

J is the amount deducted by the individual under section 110.6 for a taxation year of the individual, preceding the particular year, that includes February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000, and

K is the fraction in paragraph 38(a) that applies to the individual for the individual's taxation year referred to in the description of J.

Related Provisions: 161(7) — Effect of carryback of loss; 257 — Formula amounts cannot calculate to less than zero. See also at end of s. 111.

The descriptions of C to E in the definition "pre-1986 capital loss balance" in subsec. 111(8) amended, and the description of E.1 added, by the said c. 17, subsec. 87(5), applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000. The descriptions of C to E formerly read:

C is the total of all amounts deducted under section 110.6 in computing the individual's taxable income for taxation years preceding 1988,

D is $\frac{3}{4}$ of the total of all the amounts deducted under section 110.6 in computing the individual's taxable income for taxation years preceding the particular year and ending after 1987 and before 1990, and

E is $\frac{2}{3}$ of the total of all the amounts deducted under section 110.6 in computing the individual's taxable income for taxation years preceding the particular year and ending after 1989.

The descriptions of G and I in "pre-1986 capital loss balance" in subsec. 111(8) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsecs. 83(4), (5), applicable to the computation of taxable income for 1985 et seq. Those descriptions formerly read:

G is the total of all amounts deducted by the individual under this section in respect of that loss in computing the individual's taxable income for taxation years preceding the particular taxation year,

History: Cls. (a)(i)(A), (B) of the definition “qualified investment” in subsec. 115.2(1) amended to substitute “designated stock exchange” for “prescribed stock exchange” by 2007, c. 35, para. 68(2)(h), applicable after December 13, 2007.

(a) in the case of services provided to a non-resident individual other than a trust, the individual is not affiliated at the particular time with the Canadian service provider;

(b) in the case of services provided to a non-resident person that is a corporation or trust,

(i) the person has not, before the particular time, directly or through its agents,

(ii) the total of the fair market value, at the particular time, of investments in the partnership that are beneficially owned by persons and partnerships (other than a designated entity in respect of the Canadian service provider) that are affiliated with the Canadian service provider does not exceed 25% of the fair market value, at the particular time, of all investments in the partnership.

Proposed Amendment — 115.2(2)(c)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 4, 2002:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing further to discussions you and your colleague, [xxx] have had with Ryan Hall of this Division and your letter of April 8, 2002, in which you raise a concern about the application of paragraph 115.2(2)(c) of the Income Tax Act to non-resident persons who are members of a partnership of which residents of Canada are also members, and you request that certain amendments be made to address this concern.

As you know, section 115.2 is an interpretive rule which ensures that, provided certain conditions are met, the receipt of Canadian investment management services does not by itself cause a non-resident person to be considered to be carrying on business in Canada. (However, it should be noted that the section does not protect from Canadian taxation non-residents who for other reasons would be considered to be earning income from carrying on business in Canada.)

This section was recently amended so that it applies to all non-resident persons, including those who are members of a partnership of which one or more members are resident in Canada. As a result, the rule no longer applies to partnerships per se, but rather to the partners themselves. Paragraph 115.2(2)(c) sets out the circumstances under which the rule applies where investment services are not directly provided to non-residents but to a partnership, of which the non-residents are members.

Your concern is that the restriction in subparagraph 115.2(2)(c)(ii), which places a 25% limit on investments held in a partnership by persons who are affiliated with the Canadian service provider, may in some cases lead to consequences which are inconsistent with the Government’s stated policy objectives.

You note in your letter that the explanatory notes for the amendments to section 115.2 explain that the restrictions found in subparagraphs 115.2(2)(c)(i) and (ii) are comparable to those found in subparagraph 115.2(2)(b)(iii), but you express the view that these two restrictions are not analogous. Although we consider the mechanics of the provisions to be comparable, it would appear that the two rules differ substantively: paragraph (b) applies to limit investments in non-residents (in that paragraph, corporations and trusts) to which subsection 115.2(2) applies whereas paragraph (c) does not operate to restrict investments in non-residents who benefit from that subsection, but rather in partnerships of which they are members.

The underlying policy for the investment restrictions in subsection 115.2(2) is to ensure that a reasonable measure of independence exists between non-resident persons who benefit from section 115.2 and their service providers. Making section 115.2 available in those cases where a non-resident is a member of a partnership, of which 25% of the investments are held by persons and partnerships which are affiliated with a service provider but not with the non-resident, would not appear to compromise this policy objective. In short, it seems that the limitation found in paragraph (c) may not be an accurate proxy for gauging the level of independence between any given non-resident and a service provider who supplies investment services to a partnership of which the non-resident is a member.

Given the foregoing, the Government’s policy objective — both to treat partnerships as flow-through entities for the purposes of section 115.2 and to ensure a reasonable measure of independence exists between non-resident persons who avail themselves of the benefit of this section and their service providers — would likely be met by replacing the restriction found in paragraph (c) with a limitation that better relates to the measure of independence vis-à-vis a non-resident person and a service provider who provides investment services to a partnership of which the non-resident is a member.

We therefore intend to recommend two things: that subsection 115.2(2) be amended so that a non-resident who is a member of a partnership which receives investment services will not be denied the benefit of section 115.2 because other persons or partnerships, which are affiliated with the service provider but not with the non-resident, hold more than 25% of the fair market value of the interests in the partnership; and that, in keeping with the principle of applying section 115.2 at the partner rather than at the partnership level, the 25% investment limit apply to the non-resident partners themselves. We are prepared to recommend that these amendments apply to the 2002 and subsequent taxation years, if the non-resident so chooses.

Of course, we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendation that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, we trust that this statement of our position is helpful.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 115.2(2)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Nov. 26, 2002:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing further to your letter of August 20, 2002 and your discussions with Ryan Hall, of this Division, concerning section 115.2 of the Income Tax Act. In particular, you ask that the section, which currently applies only for the purposes of subsection 115(1) and Part XIV of the Act, be broadened to apply also for the purposes of the corporate filing requirements under section 150 of the Act.

As you know, section 115.2 is an interpretive rule which ensures that, provided certain conditions are met, the receipt of Canadian investment management services does not by itself cause a non-resident person to be considered to be carrying on business in Canada. (However, it should be noted that the section does not protect from Canadian taxation non-residents who for other reasons would be considered to be earning income from carrying on business in Canada.)

You explain that a non-resident corporation that is entitled to benefit from the protection of section 115.2 may in some cases be required to file a return in Canada solely because of the provision of designated investment services to the non-resident by a Canadian investment manager. Technical Interpretation 2001-0089875, a copy of which you attached to your letter and to which you refer, makes it clear that section 253 will deem a non-resident to be carrying on business in Canada if, for example, the non-resident carries on business outside Canada and receives designated investment services from a Canadian investment manager. Unlike section 115.2, section 253 applies for the purposes of the Act, and, as a result, the non-resident in the example would be required to file a return in Canada under section 150, which requires corporations to file returns if at any time in the year they carry on business in Canada.

You suggest that the filing requirement deters non-resident investment, and that this result is inconsistent with the policy behind section 115.2. While we are not in a position to judge its effect on non-resident investors, we recognize that the requirement adds another step and cost to non-residents who wish to invest through a Canadian investment manager. It is worth noting that the requirement to file under section 150 does not necessarily mean that a corporation entitled to benefit from the protection of section 115.2 will be taxed as if it were carrying on business in Canada. Rather, the corporation is being treated for filing purposes as if it were carrying on business in Canada. That said, expanding the application of section 115.2 to apply for the purposes of section 150 would appear to be consistent with the general policy intent of the section 115.2: to ensure that the use of a Canadian investment manager does not, by itself, cause non-residents to be treated as though they are carrying on business in Canada.

We are therefore prepared to recommend amendments to the Act along the foregoing lines. As you suggest, we will recommend that these amendments be made effective as of the original effective date of section 115.2, namely for taxation years that end after 1998.

Of course, we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendations that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, we trust that this statement of our position is helpful.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 115.2(2)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, April 28, 2008:

Dear Mr. [xxx]:

I am writing in response to your correspondence of January 2 and 16, 2008 in which you express a number of concerns, as summarized below, in respect of section 115.2 of the Income Tax Act (Act).

Services Causing a Partnership Interest to be Taxable Canadian Property

As you know, section 115.2 is an interpretive rule for the purposes of subsection 115(1) and Part XIV of the Act; it ensures that, if certain conditions are met, the provision of designated investment services by a Canadian service provider to a non-resident person does not by itself cause the non-resident person to be considered to be carrying on business in Canada.

You are concerned that the interpretive rule in section 115.2 applies only for the purposes of subsection 115(1) and Part XIV of the Act and not for the purposes of applying the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1) of the Act. In particular, you are concerned that the receipt of Canadian investment management services by a non-resident partnership may still result in the partnership being considered, for the purposes of applying the "taxable Canadian property" definition, to be carrying on business in Canada and that an interest in the partnership would therefore, because of the combined effect of paragraphs (b) and (g) of the definition "taxable Canadian property", be considered taxable Canadian property.

In your view, this result is not appropriate from a tax policy viewpoint. We agree with you and, therefore, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that subsection 115.2(2) of the Act be amended to ensure that, if the condition in paragraph (c) of the subsection is met (which paragraph requires that the time of the provision of the designated investment services to the partnership by the Canadian service provider be not more than one year after the partnership was formed and that the condition in subparagraph 115.2(2)(c)(ii) placing a 25 percent limit on investments held in the partnership by persons who are affiliated with the Canadian service provider be satisfied), property of a partnership shall, for the purposes of determining whether the non-resident's partnership interest in the partnership is "taxable Canadian property" as defined in subsection 248(1) of the Act, not be considered to be used or held by the partnership in a business carried on in Canada. We will recommend that this amendment be made applicable for taxation years that end after 2007.

Partnership information returns

Similarly, you are concerned that the interpretive rule in section 115.2 may not apply for the purposes of section 229 of the Income Tax Regulations (Regulations), which requires members of a partnership that carries on business in Canada to file information returns. You are, therefore, concerned that non-resident members of a partnership who are entitled to benefit from the protection of section 115.2 may nonetheless be required to file a partnership information return in Canada solely because of the provision of designated investment services to the partnership by a Canadian service provider.

You suggest that amendments be made to eliminate the requirement for non-resident members of a partnership to make a partnership information return for a partnership in respect of which section 115.2 applies. You argue that such a change would be consistent with the purpose of section 115.2; that it would be consistent with the comfort letter dated November 26, 2002 and signed by Mr. Brian Ernewein in which he indicated the intention of this Division to recommend to the Minister a change to section 115.2 to broaden that section such that it applies also for the purpose of the filing requirements of a corporation under section 150 of the Act; and that it would reduce the administrative burden and costs incurred in respect of the preparation of partnership information returns.

While we are in general agreement with the substance of your request, I should note that in one important respect your analysis seems to misinterpret the policy basis of section 115.2. You imply that, because this provision applies in respect of a partnership, the partnership is not carrying on business in Canada, and therefore its members should be excused from having to file information returns. In fact, section 115.2 provides only the assurance that the activities it describes do not in themselves cause a non-resident to carry on business in Canada. A given person or partnership may be the beneficiary of the section and still, as a result of its other activities, be carrying on business in Canada.

That said, we agree that expanding the application of section 115.2 of the Act such that it applies for the purpose of section 229 of the Regulations is consistent with the general policy intent of section 115.2: i.e., to ensure that the use of a Canadian service provider does not, by itself, cause non-residents to be treated as though they are carrying on business in Canada. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister that subsection 115.2(2) of the Act be amended so that it applies also for the purposes of section 229 of the Regulations. We will recommend that this amendment be made applicable for taxation years that end after 2007.

Marketing partnership interests to Canadian residents

Paragraph (d) of the definition "designated investment services" in subsection 115.2(1) applies in the case of a corporation, trust, or partnership the only undertaking of which is the investing of its funds in qualified investments; it includes, in designated investment services, the marketing of investments in the corporation, trust or partnership to non-resident investors. You argue that the scope of paragraph (d) is too narrow in that section 115.2 offers protection to non-resident members of a partnership regardless of whether the partnership has a combination of Canadian resident and non-resident members, yet paragraph (d) requires that the Canadian service provider not market investments in the partnership to Canadian residents. You also argue that such a requirement hinders the ability of Canadian asset managers to compete internationally. You therefore propose that paragraph (d) of the definition "designated investment services" in subsection 115.2(1) be broadened to permit Canadian service providers to market investments in the partnership to Canadian residents. We understand your concern; however, we are not prepared to recommend any change at this time. We will keep this matter under consideration.

While we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with our recommendations in respect of the first two matters, we hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde

(f) property of an authorized foreign bank that carries on a Canadian banking business;

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 105(2), will amend para. 116(6)(f) to read as above, applicable after June 27, 1999.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 116(6)(f) currently treats as an excluded property any property of an authorized foreign bank that is used or held in the bank’s “Canadian banking business” (defined in subsection 248(1)). The paragraph is amended to treat as excluded property all of the property of an authorized foreign bank that carries on a Canadian banking business. As a result, the treatment of authorized foreign banks will in this respect be comparable to the treatment of non-resident insurers.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 18, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing in reply to your letter of October 24, 2001, regarding the conversion rules of foreign bank branches, particularly subsection 142.7(8) and subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) of the Income Tax Act, as well as your letter of November 13, 2001 regarding the application of section 116 of the Act where an authorized foreign bank disposes of its property to a Canadian resident.

You suggest that it would be difficult for the purchaser of a taxable Canadian property from an authorized foreign bank to determine if the property were used in the bank’s Canadian banking business, and thus was an “excluded property” under section 116 such that the transaction would have no withholding implications. Therefore, you request that the purchaser be exempt from the withholding obligation in a manner similar to the relief proposed for the purposes of Part XIII and Regulation 105.

We understand the difficulty facing purchasers and, as a result, are prepared to recommend amendments to alleviate the compliance burden of purchasers acquiring taxable Canadian properties from an authorized foreign bank similar to the relief available to qualified non-resident insurance corporations described in Regulation 810.

It is also our intention to recommend that the above-noted changes be effective after June 27, 1999, coinciding with the other aspects of the taxation rules of authorized foreign bank. While I can offer no assurance that the Minister will accept our recommendations, we expect that measures along the lines I have described will be included in the next package of draft income tax technical amendments.

I trust that the above will satisfy your requirements.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

$$A \times B$$

where

A is the appropriate percentage for the year, and

B is the total of,

(a) married or common-law partnership status — in the case of an individual who at any time in the year is a married person or a person who is in a common-law partnership who supports the individual's spouse or common-law partner and is not living separate and apart from the spouse or common-law partner by reason of a breakdown of their marriage or common-law partnership, an amount equal to the total of

(i) $10,320¹⁸, and

(ii) the amount determined by the formula

$$$10,320^{18} - C$$

C is the income of the individual's spouse or common-law partner for the year or, where the individual and the individual's spouse or common-law partner are living separate and apart at the end of the year because of a breakdown of their marriage or common-law partnership, the spouse's or common-law partner's income for the year while married to, or in a common-law partnership with, the individual and not so separated,

Related Provisions: 82(3) — Optional inclusion into income of dividends received by spouse; 117.1(1) — Indexing for inflation; 118(3.1), (3.2) — Amounts for 2006-08; 118(4) — Limitations; 118(5) — No deduction where claim made for support; 118.91 — Individual resident in Canada for part of the year; 118.95(b) — Application in year individual becomes bankrupt.

History: The description of B in subsec. 118(1) amended to substitute "$10,320" for "$7,131" in subpara. (a)(i) and "$10,320" for "$6,055" in subpara. (a)(ii) by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 34(1), applicable to 2009 et seq.

Para. (a) formerly read:

(a) married [or common-law] status — in the case of an individual who at any time in the year is a married person or a person who is in a common-law partnership who supports the individual's spouse or common-law partner and is not living separate and apart from the spouse or common-law partner by reason of a breakdown of their marriage or common-law partnership, an amount equal to the total of

where

C is the greater of $606 and the income of the individual's spouse for the year or, where the individual and the individual's spouse or common-law partner are living separate and apart at the end of the year because of a breakdown of their marriage or common-law partnership, the spouse's income for the year while married or in a common-law partnership and not so separated,

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount included in computing the individual's income for the year that is

(i) a payment in respect of a life annuity out of or under a superannuation or pension plan,

(ii) an annuity payment under a registered retirement savings plan, under an "amended plan" as referred to in subsection 146(12) or under an annuity in respect of which an amount is included in computing the individual's income by reason of paragraph 56(1)(d.2),

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 106(2), will add subpara. (a)(iii.1) to the definition “pension income” in subsec. 118(7), applicable to 2004 et seq.

Technical Notes: Section 118 provides for a number of credits that are deductible in computing the tax payable by an individual, including the pension credit in subsection 118(3). The pension credit available to a taxpayer who is 65 years of age or older is based on the taxpayer’s “pension income”, as defined in subsection 118(7). Pension income includes lifetime annuity payments under a pension plan and payments under a registered retirement income fund (RRIF).

The definition “pension income” is amended to add periodic payments under a money purchase provision of a registered pension plan (RPP), to the extent that such payments are not already included. This amendment is consequential on amendments to section 8506 of the Regulations, the purpose of which is to allow money purchase RPPs to provide members with retirement benefits that are payable in the same manner as is permitted under a RRIF. Since these benefits would not be considered to be lifetime annuity payments, it is necessary to ensure that they qualify for the purpose of the pension credit.

(iv) an annuity payment under a deferred profit sharing plan or under a “revoked plan” as referred to in subsection 147(15),

(v) a payment described in subparagraph 147(2)(k)(v), or

(vi) the amount by which an annuity payment included in computing the individual’s income for the year by reason of paragraph 56(1)(d) exceeds the capital element of that payment as determined or established under paragraph 60(a), and

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount included in computing the individual’s income for the year by reason of section 12.2 of this Act or paragraph 56(1)(d.1) of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952;

"total charitable gifts" of an individual for a taxation year means the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a gift (other than a gift the fair market value of which is included in the total Crown gifts, the total cultural gifts or the total ecological gifts of the individual for the year) made by the individual in the year or in any of the 5 immediately preceding taxation years (other than in a year for which a deduction under subsection 110(2) was claimed in computing the individual's taxable income) to

"total charitable gifts", in respect of an individual for a taxation year, means the total of all amounts each of which is the eligible amount of a gift (other than a gift described in the definition "total Crown gifts", "total cultural gifts" or "total ecological gifts") made by the individual in the year or in any of the five preceding taxation years (other than in a year for which a deduction under subsection 110(2) was claimed in computing the individual's taxable income) to

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 107(2), will amend the opening words of the definition "total charitable gifts" in subsec. 118.1(1) to read as above, applicable to gifts made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Section 118.1 provides for a charitable donations tax credit to individuals in respect of gifts made to registered charities and to certain other entities. Section 118.1 is amended to expand the entities referred to in this section to include municipal or public bodies performing a function of government in Canada. This amendment is in response to the Quebec Court of Appeal decision in Tawich Development Corporation v. Deputy Minister of Revenue of Quebec, 2001 D.T.C. 5144. For additional information, see the commentary to paragraph 149(1)(d.5).

The amendments to section 118.1, described below, are made consequential to the addition of new subsections 248(30) to (39). Generally, those subsections clarify the circumstances under which a transfer of property will be considered a gift notwithstanding that the donor may be entitled to receive an advantage or benefit in respect of the property. New subsection 248(31) generally provides that the "eligible amount" of the gift is the excess of the fair market value of a property transferred by way of gift over the value of the advantage or benefit, if any, to which the transferor is entitled. For additional information, see the commentary to new subsections 248(30) to (39).

Subsection 118.1(1) provides definitions of the terms "total charitable gifts", "total Crown gifts", "total cultural gifts" and "total ecological gifts". These definitions apply for the purpose of the tax credit available under subsection 118.1(3) to individuals who make such gifts. The amount of a gift that is eligible for a tax credit is, generally, the fair market value of the property disposed of by the individual in the making of the gift.

The definitions "total charitable gifts", "total Crown gifts", "total cultural gifts" and "total ecological gifts" in subsection 118.1(1) are amended, as a consequence of the addition of new subsection 248(31), to provide that the amount that qualifies for the credit under subsection 118.1(3) is the "eligible amount" of a gift.

In addition, the definition of "total charitable gifts" and the definition of "total ecological gifts" in subsection 118.1(1) are expanded to include a gift to a municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada.

- (b) the gift was made to a registered charity listed under the International Humanitarian Assistance program of the Canadian International Development Agency;

"total gifts" of an individual for a taxation year means the total of

(a) the least of

(i) the individual's total charitable gifts for the year,

(ii) the individual's income for the year where the individual dies in the year or in the following taxation year, and

(iii) in any other case, the lesser of the individual's income for the year and the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the individual's income for the year,

B is the total of all amounts each of which is a taxable capital gain of the individual for the year from a disposition that is the making of a gift made by the individual in the year, which gift is included in the individual's total charitable gifts for the year,

Proposed Amendment — 118.1(1) "total gifts" (a)(iii) B

B is the total of all amounts, each of which is that proportion of the individual's taxable capital gain for the taxation year in respect of a gift made by the individual in the taxation year (in respect of which gift an eligible amount is included in the individual's total charitable gifts for the taxation year) that the eligible amount of the gift is of the individual's proceeds of disposition in respect of the gift,

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 107(6), will amend the description of B in subpara. (a)(iii) of the definition "total gifts" in subsec. 118.1(1) to read as above, applicable to gifts made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Variable B in the formula in the definition of "total gifts" in subsection 118.1(1) generally provides that 100% of a taxable capital gain that results from a gift is included in the annual income limit that applies to gifts. This is an enhancement of the 75% income limit that generally applies to other types of income. Variable B is amended as a consequence of the addition of new subsection 248(31), to ensure that the enhanced income limit only applies to the portion of a taxable capital gain that relates to the eligible amount of a gift.

C is the total of all amounts each of which is a taxable capital gain of the individual for the year, because of subsection 40(1.01), from a disposition of a property in a preceding taxation year,

D is the total of all amounts each of which is determined in respect of the individual's depreciable property of a prescribed class and equal to the lesser of

(A) the amount included under subsection 13(1) in respect of the class in computing the individual's income for the year, and

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is determined in respect of a disposition that is the making of a gift of property of the class made by the individual in the year that is included in the individual's total charitable gifts for the year and equal to the lesser of

(I) the proceeds of disposition of the property minus any outlays and expenses to the extent that they were made or incurred by the individual for the purpose of making the disposition, and

(II) the capital cost to the individual of the property, and

Proposed Amendment — 118.1(1) "total gifts" (a)(iii) D(B)

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is determined in respect of a disposition that is the making of a gift of property of the class made by the individual in the year (in respect of which gift an eligible amount is included in the individual's total charitable gifts for the taxation year) equal to the lesser of

(I) that proportion, of the amount by which the proceeds of disposition of the property exceed any outlays and expenses, to the extent that they were made or incurred by the individual for the purpose of making the disposition, that the eligible amount of the gift is of the individual's proceeds of disposition in respect of the gift, and

(II) that proportion, of the capital cost to the individual of the property, that the eligible amount of the gift is of the individual's proceeds of disposition in respect of the gift, and

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 107(7), will amend cl. (B) in the description of D in subpara. (a)(iii) of the definition "total gifts" in subsec. 118.1(1) to read as above, applicable to gifts made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: See under 118.1(1)"total gifts"(a)(iii)B above.

E is the total of all amounts each of which is the portion of an amount deducted under section 110.6 in computing the individual's taxable income for the year that can reasonably be considered to be in respect of a gift referred to in the description of B or C,

(b) the individual's total Crown gifts for the year,

(c) the individual's total cultural gifts for the year, and

(d) the individual's total ecological gifts for the year.

Related Provisions: 248(35)–(39) — Value of gift limited to cost if acquired within 3 years or as tax shelter; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: 1999, c. 22, s. 33 provides the following special rule, applicable to taxation years that ended after November 15, 1997 and before 1998.

For the purposes of the Act, if

(a) a taxpayer made a gift at any particular time before February 1998, and after the end of a taxation year that ended after November 15, 1997 and before 1998, that would be deductible under section 110.1 or 118.1 of the Act in computing the taxpayer's taxable income or tax payable under Part I of the Act for the year if it were made immediately before the end of the year,

(b) the gift was a gift of tangible property (other than real property) or a gift by cash, cheque, credit card or money order,

(c) the gift was not made

(i) through a payroll deduction, or

(ii) where the taxpayer died after 1997, by the taxpayer's will, and

(d) the taxpayer so elects in the taxpayer's return of income under the Act for the year or by notifying the Minister of National Revenue in writing before 1999, the taxpayer is deemed to have made the gift and, in the case of a gift of tangible property, to have disposed of the property immediately before the end of the taxpayer's taxation year that ended before 1998 and not to have done so at the particular time.

(iii) in any other case, the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the individual's income for the year,

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a taxable capital gain from a gift of property made by the individual in the year to a donee described in the definition "total charitable gifts", and

C is the total of all amounts each of which is the portion of an amount deducted under section 110.6 in computing the individual's taxable income for the year that can reasonably be considered to be in respect of a gift of capital property made by the individual in the year to a donee described in the definition "total charitable gifts".

Para. (a) of the definition "total gifts" in subsec. 118.1(1) amended by 1997, c. 25, s. 26, applicable to 1996 et seq. and, where an individual dies in 1996, to the individual's 1995 taxation year. Para. (a) formerly read:

(a) capital property to a donee described in the definition "total charitable gifts", "total Crown gifts" or "total ecological gifts" in subsection (1), or

(b) in the case of an individual who is a non-resident person, real property situated in Canada to a prescribed donee who provides an undertaking, in a form satisfactory to the Minister, to the effect that such property will be held for use in the public interest, and the fair market value of the property otherwise determined at that time exceeds its adjusted cost base to the individual, such amount, not greater than the fair market value and not less than the adjusted cost base to the individual of the property at that time, as the individual or the individual's legal representative designates in the individual's return of income under section 150 for the year in which the gift is made is, if the making of the gift is proven by filing with the Minister a receipt containing prescribed information, deemed to be the individual's proceeds of disposition of the property and, for the purposes of subsection (1), the fair market value of the gift made by the individual.

Proposed Amendment — 118.1(5.4), (6)

(5.4) Where subsec. (6) applies — Subsection (6) applies in circumstances where

(a) an individual

(i) makes a gift (by the individual's will or otherwise) at any time of capital property to a donee described in the definition "total charitable gifts", "total Crown gifts" or "total ecological gifts" in subsection (1), or

(ii) who is non-resident, makes a gift (by the individual's will or otherwise) at any time of real or immovable property situated in Canada to a prescribed donee who provides an undertaking, in a form satisfactory to the Minister, to the effect that the property will be held for use in the public interest; and

(b) the fair market value of the property otherwise determined at that time exceeds

(i) in the case of depreciable property of a prescribed class, the lesser of the undepreciated capital cost of that class at the end of the taxation year of the individual that includes that time (determined without reference to proceeds of disposition designated in respect of the property under subsection (6)) and the adjusted cost base to the individual of the property immediately before that time, and

(ii) in any other case, the adjusted cost base to the individual of the property immediately before that time.

Related Provisions: 110.1(2.1) — Parallel rule for corporations; 248(35) — (39) — Value of gift limited to cost if acquired within 3 years, or as tax shelter.

(6) Gifts of capital property — If this subsection applies in respect of a gift by an individual of property, and the individual or the individual's legal representative designates an amount in respect of the gift in the individual's return of income under section 150 for the year in which the gift is made, the amount so designated is deemed to be the individual's proceeds of disposition of the property and, for the purpose of subsection 248(31), the fair market value of the gift, but the amount so designated may not exceed the fair market value of the property otherwise determined and may not be less than the greater of

(a) in the case of a gift made after December 20, 2002, the amount of the advantage, if any, in respect of the gift, and

(b) the amount determined under subparagraph (5.4)(b)(i) or (ii), as the case may be, in respect of the property.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 107(9), will add subsec. 118.1(5.4) and amend subsec. (6) to read as above, applicable to gifts made after 1999 except that, for gifts made after 1999 and before December 21, 2002, the expression "subsection 248(31)" in subsec. 118.1(6) shall be read as "subsection (1)".

Technical Notes: Subsection 118.1(6) provides that, if an individual donates capital property to a charity, the individual may designate a value between the adjusted cost base and the fair market value of the donated property to be treated both as the proceeds of disposition for the purpose of calculating the individual's capital gain and the amount of the gift for the purpose of calculating the tax credit allowed for charitable donations under subsection 118.1(3).

Subsection 118.1(6) is restructured as new subsection 118.1(5.4) and revised subsection 118.1(6). New subsection 118.1(5.4) describes the circumstances under which amended subsection 118.1(6), which remain generally unchanged, will apply. However, where the property is depreciable property, subsection 118.1(5.4) includes those situations where the actual value of the gifted property is between the undepreciated capital cost of that class at the end of the taxation year of the individual and the fair market value of the gifted property.

Amended subsection 118.1(6) provides for the amount that may be designated by the individual. As with the former provision, the amount designated is deemed to be the individual's proceeds of disposition of the gift. The provision also continues to provide that the amount designated is treated as the fair market value of the property transferred by way of gift. However, under the amended version, this is for the purpose of new subsection 248(31) (changed from subsection 118.1(1)). New subsection 248(31) generally provides that the "eligible amount" of the gift is the excess of the fair market value of a property transferred by way of gift over the value of the advantage or benefit, if any, to which the transferor is entitled. The "eligible amount" is relevant to the determination of the tax credit deductible by the individual under subsection 118.1(3).

Finally, amended subsection 118.1(6) effectively allows an individual to reduce the amount of recaptured depreciation that might otherwise be calculated in respect of a gift of depreciable property, with a corresponding reduction to the eligible amount deductible in respect of the gift under subsection 118.1(6). However, the designated amount may not be lower than the amount of any actual proceeds of disposition in respect of the property (or, more specifically, the amount of the advantage in respect of the gift, as defined under new subsection 248(32)).

In particular, the amount designated by the individual in respect of the property transferred may not exceed the fair market value of the property otherwise determined, and may not be less than the greater of

- the amount of the advantage, if any, in respect of the gift, and
- the adjusted cost base of the property or, if the property is depreciable property of the individual, the undepreciated capital cost of the class of the property at the end of the individual's taxation year (determined without reference to the proceeds of disposition designated in respect of the property).

Subsections 118.1(5.4) and (6) (as amended) generally apply in respect of gifts made after 1999. For additional details regarding the eligible amount and the amount of the advantage in respect of a gift, see the commentary to new subsections 248(31) and (32).

Example

Mr. Adams transfers a rental property with a fair market value of $200,000 to a registered charity, in exchange for proceeds of disposition of $95,000. The original cost to Mr. Adams when he purchased the property in 1985 was $65,000. The rental property is the only depreciable property in its class, with an undepreciated capital cost balance before the transfer of $45,000.

Assuming that the transfer qualifies as a gift (see the commentary to subsections 248(30) to (32)), Mr. Adams may designate any amount between $95,000 and $200,000 as the proceeds of disposition for the gift. Mr. Adams could have designated an amount as low as $45,000, if he had received a lesser amount in actual proceeds from the charity.

Mr. Adams decides to designate $150,000 as its proceeds of disposition. The taxable gain to Mr. Adams on the transfer can therefore be allocated as follows:

Adjusted cost base (original cost)	65,000
Capital Gain	85,000
Taxable Capital Gain	42,500
Undepreciated Capital Cost	45,000
Recaptured depreciation	20,000
Total Income Inclusion	$ 62,500

Designated proceeds	$150,000
Amount of advantage (consideration)	95,000
Eligible amount of the gift	55,000

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Feb. 15, 2000:

Dear [xxx]

The Honourable Paul Martin, Minister of Finance, has forwarded your letter of September 7, 1999 to me for reply. It is my understanding that you have requested amendments to the Income Tax Act (the Act) that would address a situation where a resident of Switzerland would be required to pay Canadian income tax as a result of a donation of a Canadian rental building to a charity. More specifically, upon the donation to charity of their Canadian rental buildings, your Swiss clients would be required to pay tax under Part I of the Act on the resulting recaptured capital cost allowance ("CCA"), without the ability to deduct a charitable donations tax credit.

I also understand that Mr. Ed Short of this Department spoke with you in this regard and asked whether you were seeking amendments to the Act that would allow for an elective reduction of the deemed proceeds of disposition as a result of the gift (with a concurrent reduction of the base upon which the charitable donations tax credit is calculated) or amendments that would allow the claim of the charitable donations tax credit against tax on other sources of income. Your letter dated November 1, 1999 suggests that you are seeking both. That is, you have suggested not only that the disposition should (on an elective basis) not give rise to tax but that the charitable donations tax credit should also be allowed to be claimed against tax on other Canadian sources of income that a non-resident may have.

You have indicated that, on an ongoing basis, your Swiss clients have elected under section 216 of the Act to pay Part I tax on their net incomes from rental property, rather than to pay tax at the flat rate on gross rents that otherwise applies to non-residents under Part XIII of the Act. In this regard, they have claimed CCA against their rental revenues. Disposing of the rental properties for proceeds above their undepreciated capital costs would, therefore, result in recaptured CCA and, potentially, capital gains.

As you are aware, the charitable donations tax credit may be claimed by a non-resident individual to offset tax imposed under Part I of the Act on income from a business or employment carried on in Canada. The charitable donations tax credit is also available in respect of certain other sources of income, other than income from property, where the non-resident elects under section 217 of the Act to file a Part I tax return.

Property income of non-residents is, however, taxed under Part XIII, and is generally calculated as a percentage of the gross amount of revenues. The exceptions are rental income from real property and timber royalties, for which a non-resident may elect to pay tax under Part I on net income from the property. Although this election is provided in order to give non-residents some relief from Part XIII tax, the basis of relief is the method of calculating income, not the availability of tax credits. Just as the Part XIII tax on property income may not be reduced by the charitable donations tax credit, the elective Part I tax on property income may not be reduced.

However, an amendment that the Minister of Finance is prepared to support would extend the existing election to report a reduced amount of capital gain on the donation of capital property to also reduce the recaptured CCA that must be reported on the donation of a depreciable capital property. This amendment would apply equally to residents who file under section 152 of the Act and non-residents who are required to file under subsection 216(5). The result of this amendment would be that taxpayer-ers, resident and non-resident alike, would not be required to pay tax on the donation of a depreciable property.

I understand that the Minister of Finance intends to recommend that the requisite amendments to the Income Tax Act be effective for donations made after 1999.

Yours sincerely,

Munir A. Sheikh

Senior ADM, Tax Policy Branch

(7) Gifts of art [by artist] — Except where subsection (7.1) applies, where at any time, whether by the individual's will or otherwise, an individual makes a gift described in the definition "total charitable gifts" or "total Crown gifts" in subsection (1) of a work of art that was

(a) created by the individual and that is property in the individual's inventory, or

and at that time the fair market value of the work of art exceeds its cost amount to the individual, the following rules apply:

(c) where the gift is made as a consequence of the death of the individual, the gift is deemed to have been made immediately before the death, and

(d) the amount, not greater than that fair market value at the time the gift is made and not less than the cost amount of the property to the individual, that is designated in the individual's return of income under section 150 for the year in which the gift is made is, if the making of the gift is proven by filing with the Minister a receipt containing prescribed information, deemed to be the individual's proceeds of disposition of the work of art and, for the purposes of subsection (1), the fair market value of the gift made by the individual.

Proposed Amendment — 118.1(7)(d)

(d) the amount that the individual or the individual's legal representative designates in the individual's return of income under section 150 for the year in which the gift is made is deemed to be the individual's proceeds of disposition of the work of art and, for the purpose of subsection 248(31), the fair market value of the work of art, but the amount so designated may not exceed the fair market value otherwise determined of the work of art and may not be less than the greater of

(i) the amount of the advantage, if any, in respect of the gift, and

(ii) the cost amount to the individual of the work of art.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 107(11), will amend para. 118.1(7)(d) to read as above, applicable to gifts made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 118.1(7) provides that, if an artist donates artwork created by the artist and held in the artist's inventory, the artist may designate a value between the cost amount and the fair market value of the artwork to be treated both as the proceeds of disposition for the purpose of calculating the artist's income and the amount of the gift for the purpose of calculating the tax credit allowed for charitable donations under subsection 118.1(3).

If the artwork is certified as a cultural gift, as described in subsection 118.1(1), subsection 118.1(7.1) applies instead of subsection 118.1(7). Under subsection 118.1(7.1), the artist is treated as having received proceeds of disposition equal to the cost amount to the artist of the work of art for the purpose of calculating the artist's income, but the fair market value of the artwork is not affected. This means that the artist is entitled to a credit based on the value of the donation, but that the artist recognizes neither a profit nor a loss on the disposition of the work of art in computing income from a business for income tax purposes.

Paragraphs 118.1(7)(d) and (7.1)(d) are amended consequential to the addition of subsections 248(31) and (32). Amended paragraph 118.1(7.1)(d) generally provides that the artist's proceeds of disposition from a gift of cultural property that was created by the artist and held as inventory may not be lower than the amount of any actual proceeds of disposition in respect of the property (or, more specifically, the amount of the advantage in respect of the gift, as defined under new subsection 248(32)). In particular, the amount that may be designated by the artist must be the greater of the cost amount of the work of art and the amount of the advantage in respect of the gift. As a result, the artist will have business income from the disposition if the amount of the advantage in respect of the gift exceeds the cost amount to the artist of the work of art.

For gifts from an artist's inventory that are not certified cultural property, amended paragraph 118.1(7)(d) provides that the amount designated in the artist's return of income is deemed to be the artist's proceeds of disposition. The provision also continues to provide that the amount designated is treated as the fair market value of the property transferred by way of gift. However, under the amended version, this is for the purpose of new subsection 248(31) (changed from subsection 118.1(1)). New subsection 248(31) generally provides that the "eligible amount" of the gift is the excess of the fair market value of a property transferred by way of gift over the value of the advantage or benefit, if any, to which the transferor is entitled. The "eligible amount" is relevant to the determination of the tax credit deductible by the individual under subsection 118.1(3).

The amount designated in the artist's return of income in respect of the property transferred may not exceed the fair market value of the property otherwise determined, and may not be less than the greater of

- the amount of the advantage, if any, in respect of the gift, and
- the cost amount to the artist of the work of art.

As a result, the artist will have business income from the disposition to the extent that the amount of the advantage in respect of the gift (or some other amount designated in the artist's return of income, if greater) exceeds the cost amount to the artist of the work of art.

For additional details regarding the eligible amount and the amount of the advantage in respect of a gift, see the commentary to new subsections 248(31) and (32).

(a) except for the purpose of applying subsection (6) to determine the individual's proceeds of disposition of the security, the gift is deemed not to have been made;

(b) if the security ceases to be a non-qualifying security of the individual at a subsequent time that is within 60 months after the particular time and the donee has not disposed of the security at or before the subsequent time, the individual is deemed to have made a gift to the donee of property at the subsequent time and the fair market value of that gift is deemed to be the lesser of the fair market value of the security at the subsequent time and the amount of the gift made at the particular time that would, but for this subsection, have been included in the individual's total charitable gifts or total Crown gifts for a taxation year;

(c) if the security is disposed of by the donee within 60 months after the particular time and paragraph (b) does not apply to the security, the individual is deemed to have made a gift to the donee of property at the time of the disposition and the fair market value of that gift is deemed to be the lesser of the fair market value of any consideration (other than a non-qualifying security of the individual or a property that would be a non-qualifying security of the individual if the individual were alive at that time) received by the donee for the disposition and the amount of the gift made at the particular time that would, but for this subsection, have been included in the individual's total charitable gifts or total Crown gifts for a taxation year; and

(b) if the security ceases to be a non-qualifying security of the individual at a subsequent time that is within 60 months after the particular time and the donee has not disposed of the security at or before the subsequent time, the individual is deemed to have made a gift to the donee of property at the subsequent time and the fair market value of that property is deemed to be the lesser of the fair market value of the security at the subsequent time and the fair market value of the security at the particular time that would, if this Act were read without reference to this subsection, have been included in calculating the individual's total charitable gifts or total Crown gifts for a taxation year;

(c) if the security is disposed of by the donee within 60 months after the particular time and paragraph (b) does not apply to the security, the individual is deemed to have made a gift to the donee of property at the time of the disposition and the fair market value of that property is deemed to be the lesser of the fair market value of any consideration (other than a non-qualifying security of the individual or a property that would be a non-qualifying security of the individual if the individual were alive at that time) received by the donee for the disposition and the fair market value of the security at the particular time that would, if this Act were read without reference to this subsection, have been included in calculating the individual's total charitable gifts or total Crown gifts for a taxation year; and

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 107(15), will amend paras. 118.1(13)(b) and (c) to read as above, applicable to gifts made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 118.1(13) provides that, if an individual makes a gift of a "non-qualifying security" (defined in subsection 118.1(18)), that gift will be ignored for the purpose of the charitable donations tax credit.

Paragraphs 118.1(13)(b) and (c) concern the amount to be included in a taxpayer's "total charitable gifts" or "total Crown gifts" (defined in subsection 118.1(1)) for the taxation year in which a security ceases to be a "non-qualifying security" or the donee disposes of a non-qualifying security. If either of these events occurs within five years of the actual donation of the non-qualifying security by a taxpayer, the taxpayer will be treated as having made a gift at that later time. The fair market value of this deemed gift is considered to be the lesser of two amounts. The first amount is the fair market value of the security at the time that it was actually donated. (Note that this amount may have been designated by the taxpayer as a lower amount than the actual fair market value if an election were made under subsection 118.1(6) for the taxation year of the actual donation.) The second amount is

- if the security ceased at the later time to be a non-qualifying security, the fair market value of the security at that later time, or
- if the security was disposed of by the donee at that later time, the fair market value of the consideration received by the donee.

Amendments to paragraphs 118.1(13)(b) and (c) are to provide language complementary to the amendment of the definitions "total charitable gifts" and "total Crown gifts" in subsection 118.1(1).

(d) a designation under subsection (6) or 110.1(3) in respect of the gift made at the particular time may be made in the individual's return of income for the year that includes the subsequent time referred to in paragraph (b) or the time of the disposition referred to in paragraph (c).

- (a) at any particular time an individual makes a gift of property, the fair market value of the gift is deemed to be that value otherwise determined minus the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of the consideration given by the donee to so acquire a non-qualifying security so held or the fair market value of such a property so used, as the case may be.

Possible Future Amendment — Income Splitting for Caregivers of Family Members with Disabilities

The True North Strong and Free, Conservative Party election platform (conservative.ca), Oct. 7, 2008: Allowing Income Splitting for Caregivers of Family Members with Disabilities

A re-elected Conservative Government led by Stephen Harper will allow families where one spouse is not working full-time in order to care for one or more family members with disabilities — whether children or adults — to split their income between spouses for tax purposes.

(3) Partial dependency — Where more than one individual is entitled to deduct an amount under subsection (2) for a taxation year in respect of the same person, the total of all amounts so deductible for the year shall not exceed the maximum amount that would be deductible under that subsection for the year by an individual in respect of that person if that individual were the only individual entitled to deduct an amount under that subsection in respect of that person, and where the individuals cannot agree as to what portion of the amount each can deduct, the Minister may fix the portions.

(4) Additional information — Where a claim under this section or under section 118.8 is made in respect of an individual's impairment

(a) if the Minister requests in writing information with respect to the individual's impairment, its effects on the individual and, where applicable, the therapy referred to in paragraph (1)(a.1) that is required to be administered, from any person referred to in subsection (1) or (2) or section 118.8 in connection with such a claim, that person shall provide the information so requested to the Minister in writing; and

(b) if the information referred to in paragraph (a) is provided by a person referred to in paragraph (1)(a.2), the information so provided is deemed to be included in a certificate in prescribed form.

Related Provisions: 162(7) — Penalty for failure to comply with request for information.

(4) Department of Human Resources Development — The Minister may obtain the advice of the Department of Human Resources Development as to whether an individual in respect of whom an amount has been claimed under subsection (1) or (2) has a severe and prolonged impairment, the effects of which are such that the individual's ability to perform a basic activity of daily living is markedly restricted, and any person referred to in subsection (1) or (2) shall, on request in writing by that Department for information with respect to an individual's impairment and its effects on the individual, provide the information so requested.

Proposed Amendment — Interaction of s. 119 and Alternative Minimum Tax

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 9, 2004:

Dear [xxx]

I am responding to your letter dated March 3, 2004 to Mr. Lawrence Purdy of this Division regarding the interaction of the income tax rules relating to the determination of alternative minimum tax ("AMT"), and the ability of an individual to claim a credit under section 119 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

As you know, the purpose behind section 119 is to alleviate a situation where a taxpayer would be subject to taxation both on a gain arising as a result of the section 128.1 deemed disposition of shares held by the taxpayer on emigration from Canada, and on any subsequent dividends the taxpayer received on these shares and in respect of which Part XIII tax was withheld. Although the Act does not allow the taxpayer who has received dividends to claim a capital loss on the subsequent disposition of these shares, the payment of Part XIII tax can be seen as a substitute for the Part I tax paid on the gain. Section 119 therefore allows a credit to offset the potential double taxation. The credit is limited to the lesser of two amounts; that portion of the Part XIII tax paid that the denied loss is of the dividends received; and the amount of tax liability resulting from the deemed gain on the taxpayer's departure from Canada.

In your letter you describe a situation in which your client is being reassessed for the client's year of departure due to the client claiming a section 119 credit. My understanding of your client's situation is as follows. When your client emigrated from Canada your client incurred a tax liability because of the deemed disposition of assets owned by your client, which included shares. Subsequent to departure your client received dividends on these shares, for which Part XIII withholding tax was paid. Upon disposition of the shares, any loss that may have resulted was not available to your client due to the stop loss rules contained in subsection 40(3.7). However, your client did claim a section 119 credit and requested that the credit be applied against the tax liability arising on the gain on the shares that was triggered in the year of emigration.

You advise that the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) has since notified your client that the client's emigration year tax return is now being reassessed to apply AMT. This is because the section 119 credit as applied to that year has reduced your client's tax payable for the year to a level at which AMT applies. In your view, this negates the purpose of the section 119 credit, as your client is faced with double taxation, since part of the AMT represents tax on the gain from the deemed disposition on departure. You request that we recommend an amendment to the Act, so as to allow your client the ability to claim a full section 119 credit without this claim causing the AMT rules to apply.

Again as I am sure you know, the purpose to the AMT rules is to ensure that individual taxpayers who have significant income pay at least a minimum amount of tax in any particular year. These rules generally speaking recalculate a taxpayer's tax payable by redetermining the taxpayer's income for the year. Essentially the taxpayer adds back to their income what are generally known as "preferences" or deductions that the taxpayer is entitled to. If the amount of AMT determined is greater than the amount of regular Part I tax payable then the taxpayer is liable for the AMT amount.

The interaction between AMT, regular Part I tax and section 119 credits is complex. And it seems to me that there are two potential situations when a difficulty could result. The first situation is one in which the taxpayer was assessed AMT for the year of departure, and subsequently attempts to claim a section 119 credit for that year. It is my understanding that the CRA has advised you that the current rules would not allow the taxpayer in this situation to claim such a credit. Although the purpose of AMT is to ensure an individual pays a minimum amount of tax, I agree with you that, in policy terms, a taxpayer should not be restricted from claiming a section 119 credit merely because the taxpayer was subject to AMT. To do so could result in the potential for double taxation that section 119 is designed to avoid.

The second situation in which a difficulty could arise is the situation your client appears to be facing. In this second instance, the taxpayer was assessed regular Part I tax for the year of departure. In claiming a section 119 credit for that year, the taxpayer is then reassessed because the section 119 credit reduces the regular Part I tax payable to an amount below the tax payable under the AMT rules. The taxpayer is then assessed the higher AMT tax payable for that year. In this situation too, I see no reason in policy terms why a taxpayer should be made subject to AMT simply because the taxpayer claimed a section 119 credit.

This being the case, I am prepared to recommend an amendment to the Income Tax Act so that a taxpayer that has paid AMT for the taxpayer year of emigration is not barred from claiming a section 119 credit. In addition, I am willing to recommend an amendment that would prevent a taxpayer from being reassessed and subjected to AMT for the year of departure from Canada due solely to the application of a section 119 credit to that year.

I note in your letter that you request this amendment be retroactive to the effective date for the application of section 119, which was to dispositions that occurred after December 23, 1998 for individuals that departed Canada after October 1, 1996. We do not normally recommend that changes such as this be made on such a markedly retroactive basis, since both taxpayers and the Government need to be able to rely at any particular time on the law as it exists at that time. Exceptionally, however, we do recommend linking a relieving change to the transaction or circumstance that makes the Government aware of the need for the change. In this case, it is our understanding that this fact situation applies to your client's 2002 taxation year and therefore we are willing to recommend that this change apply to an individual's 2002 and subsequent taxation years.

I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendation that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, I hope that this statement of our position is helpful. Thank you for bringing this issue to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Emewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 7, 2004:

[xxx], Fraser Milner Casgrain LLP, Toronto, ON

Dear [xxx]:

I am responding to your letter dated October 1, 2004 regarding the effective date of proposed amendments concerning the determination of alternative minimum tax (AMT) and the ability of an individual to claim a credit under section 119 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). Section 119 allows for a tax credit to alleviate the overlap of tax resulting from a subsection 128.1(4) deemed disposition of a capital property and the Part XIII tax on dividends that reduce the taxpayer's loss on that property.

As you know, I have indicated that I am prepared to recommend an amendment to the Act so that a taxpayer who has paid AMT for the year of emigration is not barred from claiming a section 119 credit. In addition, I have indicated that I am prepared to recommend an amendment that would prevent a taxpayer from being reassessed and subjected to AMT for the year of departure from Canada due solely to the application of a section 119 credit to that year. I proposed that these amendments apply to an individual's 2002 and subsequent taxation years.

In your letter you request that the proposed amendments have effect from 1997 in order to provide relief to the individual on whose behalf you contacted us. Following further review of the policy considerations behind these proposed amendments, I believe there is justification for a retroactive application date that corresponds with the inception of the section 119 credit. Therefore, I am prepared to recommend that the proposed amendments affect dispositions after December 23, 1998 by individuals who ceased to be resident in Canada after October 1, 1996.

As I am sure you know, I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendation that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, I hope that this statement of our position is helpful.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Emewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

120.1 [Repealed]

History [120.1]: S. 120.1 repealed by 2000, c. 19, s. 28, applicable to 1998 et seq. It formerly read:

120.1 (1) Forward averaging credit—There may be deducted from the amount that would, but for this section, be the tax otherwise payable under this Part (other than the tax payable with respect to a return of income referred to in subsection 110.4(5)) by an individual for a taxation year an amount equal to the product obtained when

- (a) the amount specified in the individual's election for the year under subsection 110.4(2) and, where the individual's legal representative has filed on the individual's behalf an election under subsection (2) for the year, the individual's accumulated averaging amount at the end of the year

- (b) the percentage referred to in paragraph 117(2)(c).

(2) Year of death—Where an individual dies in a taxation year before 1998 (and is resident in Canada at the time of death) and the individual's legal representative files with the individual's return of income (other than a return of income referred to in subsection 110.4(5)) for the year an election in prescribed form on or before the day on or before which the return is required to be filed, there shall be added to the amount that would, but for this section, be the individual's tax payable for the year under this Part with respect to the return of income an amount equal to the amount, if any, by which

- (a) the total of the taxes that would have been payable by the individual under this Part for the three immediately preceding taxation years if the individual's taxable income otherwise determined for each of those years were increased by $\frac{1}{3}$ of the individual's accumulated averaging amount at the end of the year in which the individual died and if this Part were read without reference to sections 119 to 127.3

- (b) the total of the taxes that would have been payable by the individual under this Part for the three immediately preceding taxation years if this Part were read without reference to sections 119 to 127.3.

(3) Deduction and additions—Each amount deducted or added under subsection (1) or (2) in computing the tax payable under this Part by an individual for a taxation year shall, notwithstanding those subsections, be equal to the total of

- (a) the amount that would, but for this subsection, be determined for the year under subsection (1) or (2), as the case may be, and
- (b) an amount equal to that proportion of 52% of the amount referred to in paragraph (a) that
 - (i) the individual's income for the year, other than the individual's income earned in the year in a province,

(ii) the individual's income for the year.

(4) Presumption — Where the amount deductible by an individual under subsection (1) exceeds the amount that would, but for that subsection, be the individual's tax otherwise payable under this Part for the year, the excess shall be deemed to be an amount paid by the individual, on the day the individual was required to file the election under subsection 110.4(2), on account of the individual's tax for the year under this Part.

(5) Reduction — Notwithstanding subsection (4), the amount of the excess referred to in that subsection shall be reduced by an amount equal to that proportion of 16.5% of the amount of the excess that

(a) the individual's income earned in the year in a province that, on January 1, 1973, was a province providing schooling allowances (within the meaning of the Youth Allowances Act, chapter Y-1 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1970)

(b) the individual's income for the year.

(6) Individual not resident — Where an individual was not resident in Canada throughout the taxation years referred to in paragraph (2)(b), the amount determined under that paragraph shall be equal to the amount that would have been so determined if the individual had been resident in Canada throughout those years and the individual's incomes for those years had been from sources in Canada.

(7) Application — This section does not apply to an individual described in subsection (6) unless the individual's legal representatives have, on or before the day on or before which they were required to file the individual's return of income under this Part for the taxation year in which the individual died (or would have been required to file such a return had tax been payable by the individual under this Part for the year), filed a return of the individual's income for each of the three taxation years referred to in paragraph (2)(b) in the same form and containing the same information as the return that the individual, or legal representatives, would have been required to file under this Part if the individual had been resident in Canada throughout each of those three years and if tax had been payable by the individual under this Part for each of those three years.

(8) Amount required to be included — Where an amount is required by virtue of this section to be included in computing the individual's tax otherwise payable under this Part for a taxation year, the references in subsection 120(1) and section 121 of this Act and subsection 120(3.1) of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, to "the tax otherwise payable under this Part" shall be read as references to "the amount that would, but for section 120.1, be the tax otherwise payable under this Part".

That portion of para. 120.1(3)(b) preceding subpara. (i) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 97, to substitute "52%" for "47%", applicable to 1989 et seq. except that for the 1989 taxation year "52%" shall be read as "49.5%".

120.2 (1) Minimum tax carry-over — There may be deducted from the amount that, but for this section, section 120 and subsection 120.4(2), would be an individual's tax payable under this Part for a particular taxation year such amount as the individual claims not exceeding the lesser of

(a) the portion of the total of the individual's additional taxes determined under subsection (3) for the 7 taxation years immediately preceding the particular year that was not deducted in computing the individual's tax payable under this Part for a taxation year preceding the particular year, and

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount that, but for this section, section 120 and subsection 120.4(2), would be the individual's tax payable under this Part for the particular year if the individual were not entitled to any deduction under any of sections 126, 127 and 127.4

(ii) the individual's minimum amount for the particular year determined under section 127.51.

(2) [Repealed under former Act]

(3) Additional tax determined — For the purposes of subsection (1), additional tax of an individual for a taxation year is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the individual's minimum amount for the year determined under section 127.51

exceeds the total of

(b) the amount that, but for section 120 and subsection 120.4(2), would be the individual's tax payable under this Part for the year if the individual were not entitled to any deduction under any of sections 126, 127 and 127.4, and

Proposed Amendment — 120.2(3)(b)

(b) the amount that, if this Act were read without reference to section 120, would be the individual's tax payable under this Part for the year if the individual were not entitled to any deduction under any of sections 126, 127 and 127.4, and

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), s. 113, will amend para. 120.2(3)(b) to read as above, applicable to 2000 et seq.

Technical Notes: Section 120.2 allows an individual to apply additional taxes, imposed for a given year under the minimum tax in section 127.5, against the individual's ordinary Part I tax liability for following years. Paragraph 120.2(3)(b) is amended to remove the reference in that paragraph to subsection 120.4(2). This [a]mendment ensures that an individual's additional tax in respect of the minimum tax does not include the special 29% tax imposed under section 120.4 on certain passive income of minors.

(c) that proportion of the amount, if any, by which

(i) the individual's special foreign tax credit for the year determined under section 127.54

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts deductible under section 126 from the individual's tax for the year

that

(iii) the amount of the individual's foreign taxes for the year within the meaning assigned by subsection 127.54(1)

is of

(iv) the amount that would be the individual's foreign taxes for the year within the meaning assigned by subsection 127.54(1) if the definition "foreign taxes" in that subsection were read without reference to "2/3 of".

History: Subsec. 120.2(4) amended by 2001, c. 17, s. 104, applicable to 1996 et seq. Subsec. 120.2(4) formerly read:

(4) Subsection (1) does not apply in respect of

(1) There may be deducted from the amount that, but for this section and sections 120 and 120.1, would be the tax payable under this Part by an individual for a particular taxation year such amount as the individual may claim not exceeding the lesser of

(i) the amount that, but for this section, subsection 117(6), sections 120 and 120.1, would be the individual's tax payable under this Part for the particular year if the individual were not entitled to any deduction under any of sections 126, 127 and 127.2 to 127.4

120.31 Lump-sum payments [averaging] — (1) Definitions — The definitions in subsection 110.2(1) apply in this section.

(2) Addition to tax payable — There shall be added in computing an individual's tax payable under this Part for a particular taxation year the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the individual's notional tax payable for an eligible taxation year to which a specified portion of a qualifying amount received by the individual relates and in respect of which an amount is deducted under section 110.2 in computing the individual's taxable income for the particular year

(b) the individual's tax payable under this Part for the eligible taxation year.

Forms: T1198: Statement of qualifying retroactive lump-sum payment.

(3) Notional tax payable — For the purpose of subsection (2), an individual's notional tax payable for an eligible taxation year, calculated for the purpose of computing the individual's tax payable under this Part for a taxation year (in this subsection referred to as "the year of receipt") in which the individual received a qualifying amount, is the total of

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount that would be the individual's tax payable under this Part for the eligible taxation year if the total of all amounts, each of which is the specified portion, in relation to the eligible taxation year, of a qualifying amount received by the individual before the end of the year of receipt, were added in computing the individual's taxable income for the eligible taxation year

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount, in respect of a qualifying amount received by the individual before the year of receipt, that was included because of this paragraph in computing the individual's notional tax payable under this Part for the eligible taxation year, and

(b) where the eligible taxation year ended before the taxation year preceding the year of receipt, an amount equal to the amount that would be calculated as interest payable on the amount determined under paragraph (a) if it were so calculated

Proposed Amendment — 120.31(3)(b) opening words

(b) if the eligible taxation year ended before the taxation year preceding the year of receipt, an amount equal to the amount that would be calculated as interest payable on the amount, if any, by which the amount determined under paragraph (a) in respect of the eligible taxation year exceeds the taxpayer's tax payable under this Part for that year, if the amount that would be calculated as interest payable on that excess were calculated

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), s. 114, will amend the opening words of para. 120.31(3)(b) to read as above, applicable to 1995 et seq.

Technical Notes: Section 120.31 provides for the calculation of the tax payable on certain lump-sum payments. The amount of the tax is equal to the total of the additional taxes that would be payable for each relevant taxation year if the portion of the lump-sum payment that relates to that preceding year were added to the individual's taxable income for that year.

A notional amount of interest (using the rate of interest on tax refunds applicable to the relevant period) is added to the additional tax to take into account the fact that the calculation of the tax on the lump-sum payment should reflect not only the additional tax that would have been payable had the payment been received on an on-going basis, but also the fact that this additional tax was not paid during those preceding years.

The amendment to paragraph 120.31(3)(b) clarifies that the notional amount of interest is calculated on the amount of the additional tax for each relevant previous year and not on the whole tax payable for that year. This amendment applies to the 1995 and subsequent taxation years.

(i) for the period that began on May 1 of the year following the eligible taxation year and that ended immediately before the year of receipt, and

(ii) at the prescribed rate that is applicable for the purpose of subsection 164(3) with respect to the period.

Regulations: 4301(b) (prescribed rate of interest).

"split income", of a specified individual for a taxation year, means the total of all amounts (other than excluded amounts) each of which is

(a) an amount required to be included in computing the individual's income for the year

(i) in respect of taxable dividends received by the individual in respect of shares of the capital stock of a corporation (other than shares of a class listed on a designated stock exchange or shares of the capital stock of a mutual fund corporation), or

Proposed Amendment — 120.4(1) "split income" (b)(ii) opening words

(ii) can reasonably be considered to be income derived from the provision of property or services by a partnership or trust to, or in support of, a business carried on by

Technical Notes: The expression "split income" describes the type of income to which this measure applies.

Among other things, split income of an individual includes all amounts (other than excluded amounts) required to be included in the individual's income in respect of partnership or trust income if the source of the income is the provision of goods or services by the partnership or trust to, or in support of, a business carried on by

- a person who is related to the individual,
- a corporation of which a person who is related to the individual is a specified shareholder, or
- a professional corporation of which a person related to the individual is a shareholder.

The phrase "goods or services" in the English version of subparagraph (b)(ii) and clause (c)(ii)(C) in the definition "split income" is replaced by the phrase "property or services". This ensures that the split income rules will apply to income from property, such as rental income. This change applies in computing the split income of a specified individual for taxation years that begin after December 20, 2002, other than in computing an amount included in that income that is from a trust or partnership for a fiscal period or taxation year of the trust or partnership that began before December 21, 2002. Also see the commentary to subsection 160(1.2), which is amended consequential to this amendment.

(A) a person who is related to the individual at any time in the year,

(B) a corporation of which a person who is related to the individual is a specified shareholder at any time in the year, or

(C) a professional corporation of which a person related to the individual is a shareholder at any time in the year, or

(c) a portion of an amount included because of the application of subsection 104(13) or 105(2) in respect of a trust (other than a mutual fund trust) in computing the individual's income for the year, to the extent that the portion

(i) is not included in an amount described in paragraph (a), and

(ii) can reasonably be considered

(A) to be in respect of taxable dividends received in respect of shares of the capital stock of a corporation (other than shares of a class listed on a designated stock exchange or shares of the capital stock of a mutual fund corporation),

(B) to arise because of the application of section 15 in respect of the ownership by any person of shares of the capital stock of a corporation (other than shares of a class listed on a designated stock exchange), or

where

C is the net corporate income tax rate in respect of the SIFT trust for the taxation year,

D is the provincial SIFT tax rate of the SIFT trust for the taxation year, and

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part I — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 30(1), will amend the opening words of subsec. 122(2), applicable to trust taxation years that begin after 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 122(1) provides that, instead of graduated income tax rates, inter vivos trusts are generally subject to top marginal rates of income tax on their undistributed income. Subsection 122(2), which does not apply to mutual fund trusts, permits graduated income tax rates for certain inter vivos trusts established before June 18, 1971. One of the conditions for an inter vivos trust continuing to qualify for graduated income tax rates is that it not receive any gifts after June 18, 1971.

The opening words of subsection 122(2) are amended to modernize the language and to clarify its intended scope.

(a) was established before June 18, 1971;

(b) was resident in Canada on June 18, 1971 and without interruption thereafter until the end of the year;

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part I — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 30(2), will add para. 122(2)(d.1), applicable to trust taxation years that begin after 2002.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 122(2)(d.1) is introduced so that the graduated income tax rates cease to apply to a trust in the event that, after June 22, 2000, a "contribution" is made to the trust. For this purpose, the expression "contribution" is defined in new section 94.

(e) has not, after June 18, 1971, incurred

(i) any debt, or

(ii) any other obligation to pay an amount, to, or guaranteed by, any person with whom any beneficiary of the trust was not dealing at arm's length; and

(f) has not received any property after December 17, 1999, where

- (i) the property was received as a result of a transfer from another trust,
- (ii) subsection (1) applied to a taxation year of the other trust that began before the property was so received, and
- (iii) no change in the beneficial ownership of the property resulted from the transfer.

"SIFT trust", being a specified investment flow-through trust, for a taxation year means a trust (other than a trust that is a real estate investment trust for the taxation year) that meets the following conditions at any time during the taxation year:

"security" of a particular entity means any right, whether absolute or contingent, conferred by the particular entity or by an entity that is affiliated with the particular entity, to receive, either immediately or in the future, an amount that can reasonably be regarded as all or any part of the capital, of the revenue or of the income of the particular entity, or as interest paid or payable by the particular entity, and for greater certainty includes

(a) a liability of the particular entity;

(b) if the particular entity is a corporation,

(i) a share of the capital stock of the corporation, and

(ii) a right to control in any manner whatever the voting rights of a share of the capital stock of the corporation;

(2) Application of definition "SIFT trust" — The definition "SIFT trust" applies to a trust for a taxation year of the trust that ends after 2006, except that if the trust would have been a SIFT trust on October 31, 2006 had that definition been in force and applied to the trust as of that date, that definition does not apply to the trust for a taxation year of the trust that ends before the earlier of

(a) 2011, and

(b) the first day after December 15, 2006 on which the trust exceeds normal growth as determined by reference to the normal growth guidelines issued by the Department of Finance on December 15, 2006, as amended from time to time, unless that excess arose as a result of a prescribed transaction.

Proposed Amendment — Normal growth guidelines

Letter from Dept. of Finance, August 8, 2008:

Mr. David Pauli, Executive Vice-President and Chief Operating Officer, CI Financial Income Fund, Toronto, ON.

Dear Mr. Pauli:

I am writing following recent discussions between representatives of CI Financial Income Fund (CI) and officials of this Department regarding the normal growth rules for Specified Investment Flow Through entities (SIFTs).

I understand that CI holds as limited partner a substantial, but less than majority, interest in a Canadian partnership (LP), which in turn holds the principal business operations of what may be described as the CI group. All or substantially all of the other limited partners, whose combined interests represent a majority of the overall equity in the partnership, are either Canadian resident individuals or taxable Canadian corporations. Those other limited partners' investments in LP are convertible into CI trust units, but none of the equity investments in LP are themselves publicly traded.

This structure, which is a familiar one to us in the SIFT context, can be characterized as a "public" entity holding an interest in a "private" entity, using those terms more in a general sense than in a technical one.

I also understand that CI is a SIFT (for convenience, I use the term "SIFT" to include those trusts and partnerships that would be SIFTs but for the transitional relief provided under the SIFT rules) that existed on October 31, 2006, and therefore can qualify for transitional relief that will suspend, until no later than 2010, its taxation as a SIFT so long as it stays within certain "normal growth guidelines". Under the SIFT taxation rules, including as they would be amended by draft legislation announced by the Minister of Finance on July 14, 2008, there is a possibility that LP is also a SIFT, in which case we expect that it also would qualify for the benefits of transitional relief. If this is so, and if none of LP's units were publicly traded on October 31, 2006, then the transitional rules would preserve LP from SIFT taxation until 2011 only if it remained within the $50 million annual growth room provided under the guidelines. This is because LP would in these circumstances not have an October 31, 2006 market capitalization amount from which to measure growth under the alternative, more generous, growth measurement mechanism.

We understand that CI is interested in making an acquisition and that the related transactions would involve the issuance to some of the vendors of new equity in the form of LP units. Since it is expected that significantly more than $50 million in LP units would be issued, you are concerned that such a transaction would cause LP to lose its transitional status. As well, because the new LP units would be convertible into CI trust units, the issuance of the LP units would also count as the issuance of new equity of CI for purposes of determining CI's growth limits. Although the new LP units could be described as having different equity characteristics pertaining to LP from their characteristics as regards CI, CI's representatives have argued that what is in economic terms only a single increase in the equity of the CI-LP "group" would be counted twice. As a result, CI is now seeking a change to the SIFT taxation rules.

I can confirm — and indeed it has always been intended — that entities in which SIFTs have ownership interests may themselves be SIFTs in the appropriate circumstances. However, I recognize that in certain situations this Department's intention in the normal growth guidelines can be maintained without having both what I have termed a public SIFT and the private SIFT beneath it include the same equity units in measuring their respective growth amounts. I am prepared, therefore, to recommend that the normal growth guidelines be modified accordingly.

If modified, the guidelines would not require, in circumstances where new equity of a private SIFT is either convertible into equity of the associated public SIFT, or can reasonably be considered to have been funded with an issuance of new equity by the public SIFT, that new equity to be counted against the private SIFT's growth room. Under such a change, CI, by way of example, would treat the equity issued by LP in the same manner as if CI itself had issued it. For its part, LP would not have to recognize the equity at all for purposes of the guidelines.

I trust that this proposed modification of the guidelines responds to the concerns you have raised in this regard. For completeness, and mindful of the importance of the normal growth guidelines to a large number of SIFTs, I would nonetheless like to add a few further points of explanation.

First, we consider this "single counting" principle to be relevant only where the private SIFT is truly private — that is, where none of its own equity is publicly traded and it is thus a SIFT only indirectly. If instead one publicly-traded SIFT uses the proceeds of a new equity issuance to invest in new equity of another publicly-traded SIFT, both of those public SIFTs have indeed grown, and both can properly be required to count the growth.

Second, this recommendation is for a modification of the transitional normal growth guidelines only. It has no significance for any entity that was not a SIFT on October 31, 2006 (except those that may be formed on the merger or reorganization of trusts or partnerships that are themselves entitled to the SIFT rules' transitional relief). In addition, while we do not propose to require a public SIFT to have any particular level of ownership in a private SIFT in order for the latter to benefit from this change, the intended beneficiaries are structures that were already in place on October 31, 2006.

Finally, although we recognize that a private SIFT may issue new equity that is neither convertible into nor funded by the equity of a public SIFT, we would not propose that such equity be counted against the growth room of the public SIFT. Rather it should count against the $50 million annual room of the private SIFT itself. We realize that this allows the group as a whole access not only to the growth room of the public SIFT but also to that of the private SIFT, giving a more favourable result than would a strict application of the "single-counting" principle. However, as rules of general application, it would not be appropriate to seek to tailor the guidelines to every situation. To deal comprehensively with all such cases would require a disproportionate level of detail and insert an unjustifiable layer of complexity to the rules.

Having recorded these additional observations, I should perhaps add that none of them affects the central point of this letter in relation to CI's situation as I understand it. That is, what you have identified as the "double counting" issue should be resolved by the change I have described.

I trust that this statement of our position is helpful to you. Thank you for bringing your concerns to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, General Director — Legislation, Tax Policy Branch

Technical Notes: Subsection 122.1(2) limits the application of the definition "SIFT trust" in subsection (1) for the 2007 to 2010 taxation years. Where a trust (in this commentary referred to as a "transitional SIFT") would, under the text of that definition, be a SIFT trust on October 31, 2006, subsection 122.1(2) provides that the SIFT trust definition will not apply until the earlier of the trust's 2011 taxation year or the taxation year in which the trust exceeds its normal growth (as determined by guidelines issued by the Department of Finance on December 15, 2006), unless that excess arose as a result of a prescribed transaction.

For this purpose, the normal growth guidelines set the maximum growth from November 2006 to December 2010 as the greater of $50 million and a safe harbour amount. That safe harbour amount is measured with respect to the transitional SIFT's market capitalization on October 31, 2006 and is staged as follows: 40% for Nov 2006–Dec 2007; 20% for 2008; 20% for 2009; and 20% for 2010. These percentages are cumulative (the $50 million "de minimis" amount is not), meaning that a transitional SIFT will be able to issue, as of January 2010, new equity of up to 100% of its October 31, 2006 market capitalization.

This note is included to serve as notification that the Department's normal growth guidelines are revised, effective December 4, 2008.

The first revision applies to certain situations involving a transitional SIFT, units of which are publicly traded, that holds securities in another transitional SIFT (whether a trust or partnership and referred to in this commentary as the "second transitional SIFT") the units of which are not publicly traded. If the transitional SIFT's securities in the second transitional SIFT are non-portfolio property of the transitional SIFT (determined for purposes of this revision to the guidelines as through the definition "non-portfolio property" in subsection 122.1(1) were read without reference to its paragraphs (b) and (c) and as though a reference to "10%" in its paragraph (a) were a reference to "25%"), then new equity issued by the second transitional SIFT will count towards the growth of the transitional SIFT and not the second transitional SIFT, provided either or both of two conditions are met. Those conditions are:

- that the new equity is convertible into the equity of the transitional SIFT; and
- that the new equity can reasonably be regarded to be funded by the issuance of new equity in the transitional SIFT.

This revision of the normal growth guidelines is intended to prevent, in the particular circumstances described, an inappropriate duplication of growth as between the transitional SIFT and the second transitional SIFT where there is a sufficient level of non-arm's length relations between the two entities.

The normal growth guidelines are also being revised to accelerate the safe harbour amount for each of 2009 and 2010 so that it is available on and after December 4, 2008. This change does not change the maximum available growth of a transitional SIFT, but allows it to use remaining growth room in a single year, rather than staging it (i.e., at 20% per year) over the 2009 and 2010 years. As a result, for the period from December 4, 2008 to the end of 2010, a grandfathered SIFT's safe harbour will be a maximum of 60% of its market capitalization on October 31, 2006. For example, a SIFT that had issued in 2008 before December 4, 2008 new equity amounting to 15% of its market capitalization on October 31, 2006, would have a remaining safe harbour for the period from December 4, 2008 to the end of 2010 of 45% (i.e., 60% - 15%) of that October 31, 2006 market capitalization.

It should be noted that the annual safe harbour amounts remains cumulative. Thus for example a transitional SIFT that had issued no new equity in the period between October 31, 2006 and December 4, 2008 would, as of December 4, 2008, be able to issue new equity up to 100% of its October 31, 2006 market capitalization without exceeding its normal growth.

Proposed Amendment — 122.3(1.1)

(1.1) Excluded income — No amount may be included under paragraph (1)(d) in respect of an individual's income for a taxation year from the individual's employment by an employer

(a) if

(i) the employer carries on a business of providing services and does not employ in the business throughout the year more than five full-time employees,

(ii) the individual

(A) does not deal at arm's length with the employer, or is a specified shareholder of the employer, or

(B) where the employer is a partnership, does not deal at arm's length with a member of the partnership, or is a specified shareholder of a member of the partnership, and

(iii) but for the existence of the employer, the individual would reasonably be regarded as being an employee of a person or partnership that is not a specified employer; or

(b) if at any time in that portion of the qualifying period that is in the taxation year

(i) the employer provides the services of the individual to a corporation, partnership or trust with which the employer does not deal at arm's length, and

(ii) the fair market value of all the issued shares of the capital stock of the corporation or of all interests in the partnership or trust, as the case may be, that are held, directly or indirectly, by persons who are resident in Canada is less than 10% of the fair market value of all those shares or interests.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 116(2), will amend subsec. 122.3(1.1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: Section 122.3 provides an "overseas employment tax credit" to individuals resident in Canada who are employed for at least six consecutive months in a foreign country by a specified employer in respect of certain enumerated activities.

Subsection 122.3(1.1), which at present limits access to the tax credit in one set of circumstances, is amended so that the credit is also unavailable in another situation. New paragraph 122.3(1.1)(b) denies an individual the benefit of the credit if, at any time in the qualifying period, the services of the individual are provided to a firm with which the employer does not deal at arm's length, and less than 10% of the fair market value of all the interests in the firm are held directly or indirectly by persons resident in Canada.

Example:

Situation:

An individual is employed by a corporation that is a specified employer. The employer supplies the individual's services to a non-resident corporation, the shares of which are held as follows: 60% are held by a non-resident corporation that also controls the individual's corporate specified employer; 20% are held by a non-resident trust, all of the units of which are held by non-residents; and 20% are held by a second non-resident trust, half of the units of which are held by residents of Canada.

Result:

Since they are related, the specified employer does not deal at arm's length with the recipient of the services in this example. However, new paragraph 122.3(1.1)(b) would not apply in this instance because residents of Canada hold, indirectly through the second trust, 10% of the interests in the recipient corporation.

The set of circumstances currently described in paragraphs 122.3(1.1)(a), (b) and (c) is contained in amended paragraph 122.3(1.1)(a), and subsection 122.3(1) is amended to ensure that the term "qualifying period" applies to subsection 122.3(1.1), as well as to subsection 122.3(1).

History: Subsec. 122.3(1.1) added by 1997, c. 25, s. 31, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Proposed Administrative Change — Separated Spouses

CRA news release, May 12, 2009: Minister of National Revenue eases requirement process for CCTB recipients.

The Honourable Jean-Pierre Blackburn, Minister of National Revenue and Minister of State (Agriculture), announced today that the Canada Revenue Canada (CRA) is simplifying the application process for the Canada Child Tax Benefit (CCTB) to make it easier for recipients to confirm their living arrangements and marital status for eligibility purposes.

"The Government of Canada is more determined than ever to make the child tax benefit administration more flexible, and to facilitate the burden of proof placed on Canadians," said Minister Blackburn. "I am pleased to announce that we have streamlined the process so that Canadians can easily exercise their right to receive their related benefit and credit payments."

The CRA recognized that, in the context of a breakdown of the marriage or relationship, it was often difficult to obtain the other spouse's or common-law partner's information in support of the benefit recipient's claim. For that reason, the CRA simplified the review process, and benefit recipients can now assess their situation and provide all required documents in one simple step. With this new process, benefit recipients who worry that the CRA will not receive their former spouse's information may immediately submit two letters from independent third parties to show that they live at a residential address different from their former spouse.

"Last year, over 11 million Canadians were issued benefit payments worth $16 billion," added Minister Blackburn. "We want to keep the system fair for all taxpayers." In 2007-2008, more than 253,000 benefit accounts were reviewed and 65% were adjusted. Many of these adjustments were made to the advantage of individuals and families.

With the new amendments, some of the options available may be more suitable for benefit recipients who are recently separated or divorced. Minister Blackburn noted that, if taxpayers are having difficulty providing the necessary documentation, they may contact the CRA to discuss other possible options.

$$\frac{1}{12}[(A - B) + C + M]$$

where

A is the total of

(a) the product obtained by multiplying $1,090³⁸ by the number of qualified dependants in respect of whom the person was an eligible individual at the beginning of the month, and

(b) the product obtained by multiplying $75³⁸ by the number of qualified dependants, in excess of 2, in respect of whom the person was an eligible individual at the beginning of the month,

(c) [Repealed] [see History to 122.61(1) for transitional measure]

B is 4% (or where the person is an eligible individual in respect of only one qualified dependant at the beginning of the month, 2%) of the amount, if any, by which

(a) the person's adjusted income for the year

exceeds

(b) the greater of $32,000 and the dollar amount, as adjusted annually and referred to in paragraph 117(2)(a), that is used for the calendar year following the base taxation year;

C is the amount determined by the formula

$$F - (G \times H)$$

where

F is, where the person is, at the beginning of the month, an eligible individual in respect of

(a) only one qualified dependant, $1,463, and

(b) two or more qualified dependants, the total of

K is the amount referred to in paragraph (b) of the description of B, and

L is the amount referred to in paragraph (a) of the description of F, and

(a) if the person is an eligible individual in respect of only one qualified dependant, 12.2%, and

(b) if the person is an eligible individual in respect of two or more qualified dependants, the fraction (expressed as a percentage rounded to the nearest one-tenth of one per cent) of which

(i) the numerator is the total that would be determined under the description of F in respect of the eligible individual if that description were applied without reference to the fourth and subsequent qualified dependants in respect of whom the person is an eligible individual, and

(ii) the denominator is the amount referred to in paragraph (a) of the description of F, divided by 0.122; and

$$N - (O \times P)$$

where

N is the product obtained by multiplying $2,300 by the number of qualified dependants in respect of whom both

(a) an amount may be deducted under section 118.3 for the taxation year that includes the month, and where the descriptions of J, F, H, K, and L are described in the description of C, and

(b) the person is an eligible individual at the beginning of the month,
